CALLS FOR INQUIRY AFTER BOARD'S MISTAKES, DELAYS

PAROLE IS BROKEN

Vanessa Marsh, Kate Kyriacou

Calls are mounting for an inquiry into Queensland's "broken" parole system amid claims of "horrendous" delays and flawed decisions, including this week's embarrassing backflip in the case of Jack Beasley's killer.

Criminal defence lawyer Calvin Gnech (right) said Parole Board Queensland's controversial decision in the Beasley case was merely the latest example of the dysfunction within the parole system, while it is understood new Corrective Services Minister Nikki Boyd has sought an urgent briefing with the head of PBQ. Report P6-7

Magic night marks racing stars

Georgia Clelland

The Star Gold Coast Magic Millions Carnival, a hallmark event in southeast Queensland's racing calendar, is set to make history with the launch of the inaugural Magic Millions Racing Women Awards and Dinner, supported by TAB Achievement.

The event, to be held on January 6, is dedicated to honouring the exceptional achievements of women in the thoroughbred racing and breeding industry.

The awards will feature two primary categories: the Hall of Fame Award, celebrating a woman's lifelong dedication to the industry, and the National Racing Woman of the Year Award, acknowledging an individual's remarkable contribution over the past year and rewarding its winner with a $50,000 scholarship from TAB.

Finalists include racing icons Gai Waterhouse, Linda Huddy, Denise Martin and Pam O'Neill for the Hall of Fame Award, and Lindy Maurice, Annabel Neasham and Vicky Leonard for the Woman of the Year Award. The winners will be picked by an expert judging panel including Magic Millions Racing Women patron Zara Tindall MBE.

Magic Millions co-owner and founder of Magic Millions Racing Women, Katie Page-Harvey, said Saturday night's event would "celebrate the extraordinary women who love the horse and enable the thoroughbred industry to innovate and thrive".

Students feel bad vibes in schools

EXCLUSIVE

Toby Crockford

One in five children don't feel safe in Queensland schools, new state government data reveals.

The 2023 School Opinion Survey results also found more than a third of Queensland schoolchildren and over a quarter of staff believed their school did not manage behaviour well.

Almost 88,000 students were asked whether they felt safe at their school, with about 81 per cent saying yes, a decrease of 2.2 percentage points compared with the 2022 survey.

Students were also asked whether student behaviour was well managed at their school, with only 64.1 per cent agreeing, down 3.2 percentage points.

On the same question, out of 93,610 parent responses, less than 80 per cent agreed, a drop of 2.6 percentage points.

Only 73 per cent of staff agreed that student behaviour was well managed at their school, a decline of 3.4 percentage points.

One positive was that slightly fewer school staff reported being subjected to bullying last year: 12.4 per cent, down from 12.6 in 2022.

The Courier-Mail's 2023 sentiment survey also revealed parents thought bullying and bad behaviour were the biggest issues needing to be addressed in Queensland schools.

The exclusive reader survey asked what are the biggest issues in schools that need to be addressed.

Multiple answers could be selected.

Bullying and bad behaviour were clear priorities, both selected by over 70 per cent of the 6800 respondents. Vaping was third, chosen by more than 45 per cent of respondents.

Other answers included academic results, which attracted just under 44 per cent. Mental health, truancy, and overcrowding were picked by less than 36 per cent.

Education Minister Di Farmer was not surprised that bullying and bad behaviour were the main issues in schools, and said the government was taking them very seriously.

"We have significant programs in place to address bullying and bad behaviour, including student protection experts to make sure safety concerns are reported, one-on-one counselling and implementing individual student support plans, and a cyberbullying team that gets inappropriate content removed and delivers sessions for students on cyber safety," she said.

Queensland Secondary Principals' Association president Mark Breckenridge said bad behaviour and bullying were issues affecting broader society, not just schools.

"Bullying and bad behaviour impact on students' wellbeing and academic progress, and they need to remain number one issues to address in schools," he said.

"We must also remember that the vast majority of students behave appropriately every day in our schools."

Mr Breckenridge also said mental health was a growing issue.

"That has been exacerbated through Covid-19, cost of living pressures, and the housing crisis," he said.

BYD drives into EV lead

Tesla has been overtaken as the world's best-selling maker of electric cars by a Chinese rival that is backed by investor Warren Buffett.

The American carmaker run by Elon Musk said it had delivered 484,507 vehicles between October and December, about 11,000 or so more than industry analysts had predicted.

However, the Shenzhen-based BYD reported on Monday it had sold 526,409 fully electric vehicles in the same period.

It marks the first quarter in which BYD has outsold Tesla, although the latter still sold more across 2023, totalling 1.81 million cars compared with BYD's 1.57 million. Tesla's output was up 38 per cent year-on-year, but it fell short of the two million mark that Musk had targeted.

KPMG: Damaging move to cut migration

Matt Bell

Cutting immigration to combat the housing shortage is "shortsighted" and risks wages growth and much-needed improvement in productivity, KPMG Australia says.

KPMG chief economist Brendan Rynne said Australia was better off living with short-term challenges, arguing any "kneejerk" reaction risked bigger effects in the long term.

"We've got to be careful that we don't have a knee-jerk reaction and I think that the government's response hasn't been; it's been considered and positive," Dr Rynne said.

"The work we've done has consistently shown that skilled migration adds positively to the Australian economy and it does that through improvements in productivity."

During the past year there has been a significant wave of migration, driven by a surge in international students. More than 500,000 people have settled in Australia at a time when building approvals are at the lowest level in a decade.

"I'd actually live with the short-term challenges that we've got at the moment. I think ultimately the market will sort themselves out with regards to housing investment and then I'd rather do that than turn away skilled migration who are unlikely to come back later on," he said. "If we start to pare back on skilled migration then the likelihood is that down the track we won't achieve the same productivity kicker that we need and then ultimately we won't get the real wage growth that we want to see."

National accounts show labour productivity in the three months to September lifted by 0.9 per cent to record the first improvement since early 2022.

Albo offers kind words but rules out handouts

Prime Minister Anthony Albanese has told Australians not to expect a cash handout any time soon to relieve cost-of-living pressures on home budgets.

The Prime Minister said he had asked the Treasury and the Department of Finance to devise ideas that could be announced in the May federal budget; however, cash splashes and spending would be curtailed to avoid inflation.

"We asked them to give consideration to what are the measures that can take pressure off families on cost of living without putting pressure on inflation – that's the key issue," Mr Albanese said.

"If you were just to distribute additional cash to people, you potentially make inflation worse and therefore don't help to solve the problem."

As an example of how the ministries could help, Mr Albanese highlighted the government's Energy Price Relief Plan, which was developed with state and territory governments to introduce price limits on gas and coal.

The NSW and Queensland governments have set a $125-a-tonne price threshold on coal being used for electricity generation.

A 12-month emergency cap on gas prices has also been set at $12 per gigajoule for east-coast producers.

"Instead of giving cheques to people, it reduces their bills substantially and we worked that through with Treasury and finance and it made a substantial difference in a reduction in wholesale prices," Mr Albanese said.

In an effort to soften inflation to a target range between 2-3 per cent, the Reserve Bank of Australia has implemented a series of 13 rate rises since May 2022, with the 4.35 per cent cash rate denting household budgets.

The latest consumer price index figures from September revealed year-on-year household inflation had reduced to 5.4 per cent after reaching a high of 7.8 per cent in December 2022.

Mr Albanese conceded Australians were still under the pressure caused by international events, such as pandemic-related supply chain issues and the "illegal Russian invasion of Ukraine".

He said the government would attempt to alleviate the crisis through initiatives like delivering 300,000 fee-free TAFE courses and expanding the Home Guarantee Scheme to help more people own their own homes.

The Commonwealth will also work with the states and territories to strengthen Medicare and support primary healthcare operators like GPs and urgent care clinics.

Then Prime Minister John Howard debates Australia's involvement in war in Iraq in 2003.

Prime Minister Albanese has refused to say whether he believes the Morrison government tried to "cover up" secret Howard-era documents about Australia's involvement in the Iraq war.

It comes after the revelation on New Year's Day that 78 documents were missing from a now declassified file created in 2003 that reveals then Prime Minister John Howard's decision-making process before Australia entered the Iraq war.

The documents suggest Mr Howard had already decided to join the US-led invasion before taking the matter to cabinet.

At a press conference on Wednesday, Mr Albanese was asked if he was concerned about a "cover up" in regards to the missing documents.

"Well, that's why we have asked Dennis Richardson to do the review," he responded.

"I'm not aware of the circumstances. Obviously, I wasn't a member of the cabinet in 2003."

He went on to add there was "no public servant in Australia who is more respected" than Mr Richardson, the former Defence Department secretary, Department of Foreign Affairs secretary, and Director-General of Security.

Mr Richardson is due to report the results of his review in the next two weeks.

The 2003 records show Mr Howard relied on discussions with the National Security Committee when making his decision about Australia's involvement in Iraq.

Just hours before the papers were made public, the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet revealed the missing documents were not lost, but had not been handed over by the Morrison government, "oversights" it said were likely "a result of Covid-19 disruptions at the time".

The department said that the missing documents had been located on December 19 and had been since transferred to the archives.

They will be reviewed, in conjunction with security agencies, before their release.

Mr Albanese said he expected all the missing documents to be released, save for anything that could compromise national security.

"Australians do have a right to know what the decision-making process was and my government believes that this mistake must be corrected," he said.

Asylum seeker tsunami

EXCLUSIVE

Angira Bharadwaj

A record number of asylum seekers are arriving in Australia by plane with more than 2000 new arrivals every month – and the largest chunk of people seeking refuge are from conflict-free nations.

August to November last year marked four months in a row where more than 2000 asylum applications were lodged, new data revealed.

The arrivals are coming by plane on different visas and then applying for asylum once they have entered Australia.

When the Albanese government first came in, they were facing half the number of applications per month. In November, Vietnam was the country of origin for the largest number of asylum seekers, 444 people, followed by China (230), Vanuatu (129) and India (121) and the biggest demographic were men aged 25-44 years.

Despite Vietnam topping the list of arrivals, less than 5 per cent of applications from the nation were approved while less than 9 per cent of Indian applicants were successful in claiming asylum. In comparison, 100 per cent of asylum seekers from civil war-torn Myanmar were accepted.

It can also be revealed that Sydney Airport was the No. 1 point of arrival for refugees in Australia since the last election while NSW town Griffith topped the state's list of postcodes with the most asylum applicants. Former Victorian Police Commissioner Christine Nixon handed the government a review of its visa system in March which found the delays in processing the applications were encouraging people to apply for dodgy asylum applications as a means of staying in the country.

"Visa processing and review time frames for onshore protection visa applications are particularly high. This is motivating bad actors to take advantage by lodging increasing numbers of non-genuine applications for protection," the review said.

Australian Strategic Policy Centre's Dr John Coyne said the end of Covid-19 had prompted the increase in asylum seekers.

"After a pause on travel through the years of Covid-19 when the borders could be much more controlled, we have entered back into a period when we have relatively open borders," he said. "A certain percentage of those numbers (are people who) understand how the system works, they know how long it takes for the bureaucratic process to work before they are returned, they use that as a mechanism to continue working here."

Coalition immigration spokesman Dan Tehan accused Labor of being "asleep at the wheel" of their home affairs policy. Immigration Minister Andrew Giles lay the blame for long processing times on the former government and pointed to his government's investment in the system.

Stars jazz up a stage classic

Georgia Clelland

The razzle-dazzle of Broadway is set to shimmer across South Brisbane as Chicago, one of the most revered musicals of all time, begins its Queensland leg at QPAC tonight.

The iconic show, a mix of murder, scandal, jazz, and captivating performances, will call QPAC's Lyric Theatre home until February 4, before continuing its national tour in Melbourne, Sydney and Adelaide.

Chicago brings to life the story of Roxie Hart, a nightclub dancer who turns to murder and deceit in the jazz-soaked streets of 1920s Illinois.

Producer John Frost praised the calibre of the cast and crew.

"We have an extraordinary cast led by Anthony Warlow, Zoë Ventoura, Lucy Maunder, Peter Rowsthorn and Asabi Goodman, alongside the hottest ensemble in town," Frost said.

"Chicago has everything that people love about a Broadway musical – a story of fame, fortune and all that jazz, one showstopping number after another and the most amazing dancing you've ever seen."

Ensemble co-dance captain Priscilla Stavrou said the show would leave a lasting impression on audiences

"Everything about this show is iconic," Stavrou said.

Weather station broken

The Bureau of Meteorology weather station in Charters Towers has been offline since November 30 and residents are making do with their own backyard rain gauges and Facebook to track the weather.

The bureau says it's aware the weather station isn't recording observations online and it is investigating the matter "as a matter of priority".

A spokesman said weather forecasts and warnings were not impacted by this issue.

"The bureau's weather forecasts and weather warning service has been designed so that it is resilient and not dependent on any one piece of equipment," the spokesman said.

The job advertisement mentioned a future upgrade, transforming the manual weather station into an automatic one.

It's estimated the transition from manual to automatic will take two years. A weather observer is required to make 15-minute weather observations at 9am and 3pm every day, rain, hail or shine.

The Forensic Crash Unit is investigating.

YOU HAVE TO FIX BROKEN SYSTEM

'HE WILL DO IT AGAIN'

Calls are mounting for an inquiry into Queensland's "broken" parole system amid reports of "horrendous delays" and "flawed decisions", including this week's embarrassing backflip in the case of Jack Beasley's killer.

Criminal defence lawyer Calvin Gnech said the Parole Board Queensland's controversial decision in the Beasley case was the latest example of the "dysfunction" within the parole system, which has come under fire in recent years over significant delays in processing applications.

Mr Gnech said a previous inquiry in 2016 had failed to bring about much-needed change, with judges now forced to take into account inevitable delays in parole decisions when sentencing defendants.

Victims' families have thrown their support behind the push for an inquiry, including Kent Payne who learned the dangerous driver who killed his 18-year-old son Harry in 2021 would be released from prison last year in an impersonal email without warning.

He said he was on the Queensland Corrective Services victims' register but was not given an opportunity to make a submission.

"We just got an email advising he'd be released," he said.

"Not once did they call us.

"It was so impersonal receiving an email. This guy killed our son."

It is understood newly-minted Corrective Services Minister Nikki Boyd has sought an urgent briefing with the head of thePBQ following the Beasley bungle, with a decision on whether a review should be conducted to flow from their discussions.

> “ The ... error ... with the Beasley matter ... is another example of why there needs to be a new review
> Lawyer Calvin Gnech

It comes after the PBQ granted and then cancelled the parole of one of the defendants convicted of killing 17-year-old Jack Beasley, who was fatally stabbed at Surfers Paradise in 2019.

Jack's father revealed they had received a call from the PBQ on December 18 informing them the young man had applied for parole and that they had 21 days to make a submission.

But four days later they received an email saying a decision had already been made to release the killer, who had served just four years of a seven-year sentence.

PBQ then backflipped on the decision and cancelled the killer's parole this week after the Beasley family spoke out about their concerns in The Courier-Mail.

Jack's father, Brett Beasley, said he was "100 per cent" behind a review of the parole board.

"We still haven't been given a reason (as to why a mistake happened)," he said.

"We go through enough in the month of December with the anniversary of Jack's death, his funeral and Christmas time is really hard.

"We didn't have to go through that and we don't

Father of three Jarryd Miller died on January 2.

Online grief for beloved father

Nicola McNamara

Tributes are flowing for beloved Lowood father of three Jarryd Miller as police continue to investigate the circumstances of his death.

A homicide investigation commenced on Tuesday after Mr Miller was found dead in a Lowood home, west of Ipswich.

Emergency services were called to a Walnut St address in Lowood about 5am, and forensic investigators remained on scene throughout the day.

Loved ones have started sharing tributes online to remember the "loving family man", who leaves behind a partner and three children.

Close friend Samantha Hall shared how Mr Miller "always put his family first and foremost".

"He would be going crazy to see that his family can't even go back to their home, everything has been taken from them," she said.

"He was my best friend for the last 13 years and my most favourite drinking buddy.

Ms Hall started a GoFundMe to raise funds for Mr Miller's partner and children.

"Jarryd has been a huge part of so many people's life and experiences and definitely deserves the best send off we can give him," she said.

Mr Miller's sister Courtney shared her devastation online.

"My heart not only breaks for me but for your beautiful family that is now left to live life without you," she said.

"You will be forever missed my brother."

A police spokesman confirmed investigations were still ongoing on Wednesday.

Top jock leads VIP field

The Melbourne Cup's first female winning jockey Michelle Payne will be among big names.

Ms Payne, who was among a high-powered private annual Magic Millions 'Women with Horsepower' luncheon hosted by Star, said: "It is a privilege to be involved in Women with Horsepower and be a part of a group of accomplished women who are making waves in their own fields."

Samantha Scott
Kate Kyriacou

A central Queensland community is rallying around the family of a little girl who died after being found in a hot car at a property on New Year's Eve.

Police have confirmed no charges will be laid over the tragedy that happened during a gathering at a home outside Eungella, about 80km west of Mackay on Sunday.

However, after requests from the family, The Courier-Mail has opted to remove her name from this story.

The GoFundMe has also now been removed.

"This family experienced a terrible accident on New Year's Eve which resulted in the loss of their young daughter...," the GoFundMe read.

"We would like to show our support and raise some money to help the family during the grieving process, help with funeral expenses and the general cost of living while they navigate through the difficulties of losing a child."

The toddler was found unresponsive in a car at a home on Bee Creek Rd about 2pm on Sunday.

The RACQ CQ Rescue Helicopter was dispatched from Mackay and paramedics performed CPR on the little girl but she could not be revived.

It is believed about half a dozen family members were in attendance when the incident occurred and several cars could be seen at the property on Sunday afternoon, alongside police vehicles. On Tuesday police confirmed no charges would be laid.

understand why we had to."

Another man, who cannot be named to protect his son's identity, said his family had been left in the dark about the release of the teenager who stabbed his 13-year-old son in a random attack at school.

"He grabbed our son in a headlock around the neck and tried to stab him in the chest a number of times and put a knife to his throat and our son grabbed the knife with his hand and managed to get away," he said.

"We were never notified when he was going to be released. We were never consulted. It is (frustrating) and it is worrying too because we don't know anything about him or the conditions of his release."

He said the family was in full support of a review of the parole board and the wider justice system communicating with victims and their families.

"From what we've found out it's a very common thing and the whole system is biased to the perpetrator and the victim is left out of the whole system," he said.

Mr Gnech, the managing director of law firm Gnech and Associates, said a 2016 inquiry had done little to resolve the "broken" parole process.

"Then what we have faced over the last numerous years is significant and horrendous delays in the parole system," he said.

"And we have judicial precedent such as the case of Watson from the Court of Appeal in 2021 saying that judicial officers when considering sentence must now take into account what I call the dysfunction of the parole scheme in their sentencing discretion.

"Judicial officers now in the sentencing process can no longer just order the sentence they conclude is appropriate, they have to take into account the fact that there are huge delays within the parole scheme."

Mr Gnech said the Beasley matter was the latest in a series of embarrassing bungles.

"The unfortunate error that has occurred with the Beasley matter over the last seven days is another example of why there needs to be a new review or inquiry," he said.

"Parole in its proper form is a crucial aspect for dealing with those serious offenders who cannot be rehabilitated and can't be locked up forever. The parole system has to be fixed and ... it has been broken for over a decade."

According to PBQ's annual report for 2022/23, it had "entirely cleared the backlog" of 3263 outstanding matters.

"New parole applications are now being considered by the board well within the statutory timeframe," the report stated.

"That has been achieved by the continuation of the temporary fourth and fifth operating teams, and the commencement of a sixth, as well as the commitment of the board's people."

But lawyers say their clients continue to face significant delays in having their parole applications processed.

Opposition Leader David Crisafulli said the government needed to ask itself if the parole board was "fit and proper".

"What that family (the Beasley's) lived through over Christmas should never ever have happened and they are owed an apology," he said.

"They called out the nonsense, they called out being treated like doormats. On the back of that common sense prevailed.

"The government needs to ask itself, is the parole board a fit and proper entity? And does it reflect community values? Because based on this, they couldn't be further from that."

Writer aims pen at Bluey

An award-winning Muslim writer has accused Australia's iconic children's TV program, Bluey, of promoting "genocide" against Arabic people.

In a new poem shared to Instagram, titled Bluey In The Genocide, novelist Omar Sakr referred to Cricket, an episode in the show's third season that centres around the family of dogs playing the sport.

The episode, praised for its messages of good sportsmanship and family values, happens to be the series' most popular, according to an ABC poll of 50,000 Bluey fans.

Cricket centres on Bluey's red kelpie friend, Rusty, whose father is serving in the army. At one point, the episode shows Rusty's dad writing a letter to his family from the war zone.

"We watch the cricket episode, All laconic drawls and summer Games, a dedicated pup learning To play while his father is away," his poem reads.

"His name is Rusty, he's a star At bat. My son laps it up, as do I Until the end.

"The scene shifts And there is the distant dad In combat fatigues, and I learn Even in this cartoon world There is a desert full of dogs, Soldiers and guns, and somewhere Out of frame, Arabs being put down."

The ABC declined to comment on Mr Sakr's criticisms.

NT fossils shed light

Microscopic fossils found in the Northern Territory contain the oldest photosynthetic structures ever discovered, shedding light on the origins of photosynthesis.

Researchers at Belgium's University of Liege found thylakoids structures, which are also found inside plant cells, in the 1.75 billion-year-old Navifusa majensis fossils.

The scientific discovery means that photosynthesis – the process used by plants to convert water and carbon dioxide into glucose and oxygen using sunlight – may have evolved at some point before 1.75 billion years ago.

Frederik and Mary

Adella Beaini

Crown Princess Mary's new title has been confirmed as the countdown to the Australian-born royal's historic proclamation ceremony continues.

After they are crowned at Christiansborg Palace in Copenhagen on January 14, the couple will officially be known as His and Her Majesty King Frederik and Queen Mary.

"On Sunday 14 January 2024, HRH the Crown Prince will take over the Danish throne as HM King Frederik 10," the Danish Royal House said in a statement. "HRH the Crown Princess will from the same date be HM Queen Mary.

"The royal couple will henceforth bear the title of King and Queen of Denmark."

The Royal House also confirmed that the pair's 18-year-old firstborn son and future king, Prince Christian, will be officially referred to as HRH Crown Prince Christian.

Crown Princess Mary's mother-in-law Queen Margrethe, who defied centuries of Danish tradition by abdicating from the throne and is currently officially known as HM The Queen, will bear the title HM Queen Margrethe.

The Crown Princess and her husband will be proclaimed rulers of Denmark in a low-key ceremony at Christiansborg, the historic building that has an 800-year-long history as Denmark's centre of power.

The coronation is likely to take just five minutes, which was the length of Queen Margrethe's ceremony when she was crowned at Christiansborg in January 14, 1972.

It comes as Prince Christian is tipped to receive a huge royal salary drawn from Denmark's state budget, which could be in the millions, following his grandmother's abdication.

The young royal was entitled to allowance once turning 18 last October but the Danish Royal House said he would not take the money until completing his education or if the line of succession changed.

His younger siblings, Princess Isabella, 16, and twins Prince Vincent and Princess Josephine, 12, are not expected to benefit from the changes.

Mum's dream holiday before Sea World tragedy

Andrew Potts

The UK-based family of Sea World Helicopters collision victim Diane Hughes have spoken for the first time of their devastating on the one-year anniversary of her death.

Mrs Hughes and her husband Ron were among four people to die in the January 2, 2023, tragedy on the Gold Coast.

The couple, married for 18 months, were just days into a long-delayed holiday, during which Mrs Hughes was to celebrate her 58th birthday.

Her children Sian Long and Lewis Ainsworth have spoken of their grief, saying their mother's death was "a loss we all feel is indescribable".

"We have been finding it hard to come to terms with the passing of our mum, as there is a hole in our lives that can never be filled," they said.

"She was truly loved by everyone who knew her and we will miss her forever.

"She was a beloved daughter, sister, grandmother, friend and most of all, our mum, and the loss we all feel is indescribable."

January 2 marked one year since the tragic collision of the two tourist-trip helicopters over the Broadwater in front of thousands of onlookers enjoying a Gold Coast summer day.

Just 20 seconds after takeoff, their helicopter hit another Sea World Helicopter, piloted by Michael James, which was coming into land.

The main rotor of Mr Jenkinson's helicopter hit the front of the other vehicle's fuselage, shattering the canopy and showering Mr James and his passengers with glass.

Our lives changed forever ... (it) will weigh heavily on all of our hearts forever

Sian Long
Daughter of Diane Hughes

The rotor sheared off in the collision, causing Mr Jenkinson's crippled helicopter to plummet to the ground.

Nicky's mother Vanessa, Mr Jenkinson and the Hugheses were killed.

Mr James, against all odds, landed his Airbus Eurocopter, saving the lives of all his passengers.

Mrs Hughes's children said their mother lived for her family, and with each big occasion that she was not there for, her absence felt greater and greater.

Ms Long said her mother and husband had lived for adventures and truly lived life to the fullest.

"We still don't understand how they had time to work as they were always on holidays or weekends away," she said.

"If losing our mum and Ron has taught us anything, it is to treat every day as if it's your last, and soak up every moment, as nothing is guaranteed in this life.

"One year ago our lives changed forever and this tragic loss will weigh heavily on all of our hearts forever."

Ms Long said she and the family would raise a glass for Mrs Hughes on Sunday, on what would have been her 59th birthday.

Charged cyclist visits his parents

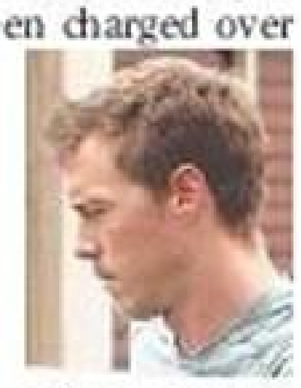
Olympian Rohan Dennis was spotted visiting his parents on Wednesday after leaving the luxury Adelaide home where he lived with his wife, Melissa Hoskins, until her tragic death late on Saturday.

The 33-year-old former pro cyclist has been charged over the death of his wife on Saturday night, with police alleging he was behind the wheel of his Volkswagen ute at the time.



Rohan Dennis returns home

Hoskins, a mother of two and also an Olympic cyclist, suffered fatal injuries in the incident, later dying in hospital.

Dennis has been charged with causing death by dangerous driving, driving without due care and endangering life, and was bailed to face court on March 13.

Dennis was spotted with his two young children after they arrived in a white Volkswagen, and were greeted by his parents, Brenton and Debbie Dennis, outside their Hazelwood Park home.

Dennis was first seen outside his property on Tuesday, later leaving the home in a silver Tarago.

He was again seen on Wednesday, leaving and later returning in the white Volkswagen.

As he entered their $2.45m property in the affluent tree-lined suburb of Medindie, Dennis again did not respond to questions from reporters about what had happened on Saturday night or how his children were coping.

Hoskins, 32, was a former professional cyclist who raced for Australia in the Olympics.

Her devastated family released a statement on Tuesday.

"Words cannot convey our grief, sadness and the tragic circumstances of Melissa's passing," Ms Hoskins' parents Peter and Amanda and sister Jess said in a statement issued through AusCycling.

Frugal funding for Fadden candidates

Andrew Potts

Less than $15,000 was donated to all candidates during last year's federal Fadden by-election on the Gold Coast.

Electoral returns published by the Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) this week show neither the winning candidate, the LNP's Cameron Caldwell, or Labor's Letitia Del Fabro took any money from supporters.

Fadden MP Cameron Caldwell

Neither parties reported any electoral expenditure to the AEC for the by-election, which was held in July 2023 following the resignation of former LNP MP Stuart Robert.

Instead, donations flowed to minor party candidates, many of whom spent significantly more on their campaigns.

Marnie Laree Davis of the Indigenous Aboriginal Party of Australia received $4257 from a single donor which covered the exactly cost of her campaign. Independent candidate Belinda Diana Jones received 56 donations, totalling $3969, however, her campaign cost $9596. Australian Federation Party candidate James Grahame Tayler received $1000 while spending $44,165.

Empathy with chooks

Seven out of 10 humans can correctly tell if a chicken is happy or not based on their clucks, according to Australian researchers.

A University of Queensland team recruited nearly 200 people and played them recordings of different chicken calls – some where they were expecting a reward and some from other contexts.

The researchers say 69 per cent of participants correctly guessed whether a chicken was excited about a potential reward, and previous experience didn't appear to change how accurate their guesses were.

The researchers say this provides evidence that we may be able to innately perceive the emotions of chickens, which could help us make better choices about their welfare.

ADF JOINS CLEAN-UP AND IT CAN'T COME FAST ENOUGH FOR VICTIMS

STORM-HIT RESIDENTS DESPERATE FOR HELP

The Australian Defence Force will have boots on the ground across the Gold Coast today to help in the clean-up following catastrophic storms and flooding in the region.

Homes were destroyed in Christmas Day storms and flooding across the Gold Coast and into the hinterland this week.

Residents on Mount Tamborine are reeling, some saying they feel like they've been abandoned, while others remain without power.

Energex has brought in a generator to power essential services at the local shopping village but it's nowhere near enough, according to FoodWorks supermarket owner Brenda Ashley.

"We can't get delivery trucks up here to restock the bread and milk or even bottled water because it's too dangerous for them with the fallen power lines, so we're driving stuff in for the community from town," Mrs Ashley said.

"We started trying to fill the fridges the other day and the Energex generator failed and was out for 12 hours. We can't buy stock if we lose power again – we've already lost $40,000."

Mrs Ashley runs the family business with her husband Michael. They say the situation in the town is dire, with septic tanks overflowing and spilling sewage into homes and neighbouring properties.

"Everyone is just getting down now," Mrs Ashley said.

"This is third-world conditions. We're living day by day and just having to try and survive. There's just no help, that's what everyone saying, they need help."

SES volunteers have been out in the community, along with a small army of Energex crews. They will be joined by 50 ADF personnel on the Gold Coast today.

Gold Coast Mayor Tom Tate said it was yet to be decided where the ADF would focus their efforts.

"This will be determined in consultation with all agencies when they arrive," he said.

"I will be announcing details around Operation Clean-Up Gold Coast in the coming days so residents and the not-for-profit sector have some certainty around when they will be assisted.

"We are now at the stage where we need maximum federal and state support through the ADF, grants, and funding to help get the city and its residents back on their feet."

A cloudy but virtually rain-free Wednesday was good news for clean-up crews, and Bureau meteorologist Helen Reid said clear skies were expected for the rest of the week, though there could be "a little bit of rainfall and possibly some thunderstorms, which could bring a couple more millimetres".

The Bureau issued a final flood warning for the Nerang and Coomera rivers at 9.30am Wednesday, saying levels had peaked and were easing.

Ms Reid said residents downstream of the Albert and Logan rivers should remain cautious as excess water flowed to sea.

A statement from Energex on Wednesday morning said 8400 homes were still without power.

New restoration estimates indicated homes in storm-battered Tamborine Mountain were expected to have power by Sunday at the latest.

Other impacted suburbs, including Wongawallan, Upper Coomera, and Guanaba should also regain power by the weekend.

Taylah Fellows

The South East Queensland Christmas tornado and flooding event has proven to be more destructive than Ex-Tropical Cyclone Jasper in the Far North, with Gold Coasters so far making at least 14,600 claims to insurers.

The Insurance Council of Australia yesterday extended its catastrophe declaration to January 3 to include storms that struck the Gold Coast on New Year's Eve.

A separate declaration had been made for TC Jasper in Far North Queensland but insurance claims for Gold Coast properties have already exceeded the number of claims from the north.

Of the 19,000 claims made to Suncorp, 12,500 were made in Queensland, including 10,800 on the Gold Coast.

This is compared to just 1700 made after Jasper.

RACQ managing director and group chief executive David Carter said they had received 3894 insurance claims for the Gold Coast and Logan since December 23, including 3575 home and contents claims and 319 motor vehicle claims.

Numbers are expected to increase dramatically after mobile and roadside assistance teams were deployed to the Gold Coast on Wednesday to help residents lodge claims.

He said teams were operating from a Mobile Member Centre at Helensvale, and from the Upper Coomera Community Recovery Centre.

Insurance Australia Group brands, including NRMA Insurance, CGU and WFI, received 6053 claims between December 21 and 29, 2023 as a result of the extreme weather across Australia.

An IAG spokesman said property assessors and partner builders were conducting emergency assessments and make-safe repairs, and hubs were available in Upper Coomera, Mudgeeraba and Jimboomba from today.

Volunteers deserve tax break

Hayden Johnson

Australians who serve their communities by volunteering could be rewarded with tax breaks and other incentives in a bid to boost declining numbers, a Queensland minister says.

As the state continues to rebuild following consecutive natural disasters, Police Minister Mark Ryan said there was an "opportunity" for the federal government to consider incentivising volunteers such as those within the State Emergency Service and Rural Fire Service.

"I think there's a piece for the federal government to look at in respect of that, because you would need to have a nationwide approach to any particular opportunity," he said. "We want to support the volunteers particularly in that emergency service volunteer space as significantly as we can but I think there is an opportunity here for the federal government to look at other proposals to support our volunteering culture right across the nation."

The Albanese government will push ahead with stage 3 tax cuts which remove the 37 per cent tax rate for people earning more than $120,000 and reduces the 32.5 per cent tax rate to 30 per cent for people earning up to $200,000.

Rain secures water grid

Torrential rain has added up to six months' supply to southeast Queensland's water grid and is likely to see the state enter next summer without drought restrictions.

About 4 per cent has been added to the water grid, enough to supply southeast Queensland with between three and six months' supply.

"It's a matter of months in terms of additional supply for southeast Queensland but what that does, it gets us close to the next summer, which obviously is another opportunity for further inflows," Seqwater's Ross Muir said.

Water is also being pumped from Somerset Dam into Wivenhoe to ensure future flood capacity is available if heavy rain returns.

Sydney visit alert for illness

Millions of people who visited Sydney's CBD over Christmas and New Year are being urged to stay alert for symptoms of legionnaires' disease after seven people were diagnosed with the debilitating lung illness.

NSW Health issued an alert on Wednesday for anyone who had been in the city centre since Christmas Eve, or the past 10 days, to monitor for symptoms including coughing, fever, shortness of breath and headaches.

It came after three women and four men, aged from their 20s to 70s, were hospitalised with pneumonia, before being identified to have been carrying the legionella bacteria.

NSW Health said symptoms of legionnaires' disease could develop up to 10 days after the time of exposure to contaminated water particles in the air and can lead to pneumonia.

The disease cannot be spread from person to person. Instead, it is usually spread by contaminated water particles emitted by a cooling system. Smokers and those with underlying health and lung problems are most at risk.

Girl of 15 'raped in hotel'

A girl, 15, was allegedly stripped naked, blindfolded and raped at knifepoint by two teens who later tried to pimp her out on Instagram, a court has heard.

Court documents reveal Al-Athmany, an Iraqi immigrant, allegedly joined a boy, 17, in tying up the girl, removing her clothes and filming themselves subjecting her to degrading and violent acts on August 27.

The court heard the teens allegedly took turns raping her.

It is claimed they then used her phone to create two Instagram posts on her account – one allegedly showing a room with the words "HMU. Roots $100".

As part of his bail, Al-Athmany must report to police daily, abide by a curfew and not leave his house unless in the company of his brother or father. The matter will return to court in February.

It's Warner's world at SCG

Ben Horne

Stories swirled around the SCG as David Warner took to his home ground for the very last time – like the one about how he banished the Bentley and took a Toyota.

When Warner first met manager James Erskine as he looked to rebuild his career after Sandpapergate, his new adviser had one piece of parting advice.

"As he was leaving, I realised he owned a Bentley. I said, 'oh by the way, one last thing – lose the Bentley," Erskine said on 3AW radio. "Four days later he arrived in a Toyota truck, so I thought that was pretty impressive." Warner reconnected with the person he is – a working class hero – and on Wednesday those people he grew up with packed into the SCG to watch his farewell, as an all-time great of Test cricket.

Father Howard and mother Lorraine, brother Steve and dozens of family and friends gathered to watch 'The Bull' one last time among 33,905 Sydneysiders – the biggest day one crowd for a Pakistan Test at the SCG. It was a family affair as Warner led his three daughters, Ivy, Indi and Isla out to the middle with him to sing the national anthem before play: the girls with 'Warner 31' emblazoned on the back of their matching whites.

In McDonald's opinion, as well as captain Pat Cummins's, Warner is the greatest three-format cricketer Australia has produced.

Choking accused fears for his job

Vanessa Marsh

A public servant accused of choking his partner on New Year's Day has been granted bail after his lawyer warned he would likely lose his job if he was not released.

The Department of Transport and Main Roads employee was one of the dozens of men and women who faced court on Tuesday for domestic violence-related offences allegedly committed during the holiday period.

The man faced Brisbane Magistrates Court after a night in the watch house and being charged with the domestic violence offences of choking and assault occasioning bodily harm.

Defence lawyer Brendan Beavon said his client had no criminal history and was a young man who had a good upbringing and enjoyed strong family support.

Mr Beavon said he accepted the allegations against his client were serious, but said he intended to contest the choking charge.

He said the defendant worked full-time for the state government but he would likely lose that position if he was remanded in custody.

Magistrate Sue Ganesan granted the man bail, which was opposed by the police, finding that the risks of granting his release could be ameliorated with conditions including that he have no contact with the aggrieved, he regularly report to police, and live with his parents.

In an unrelated matter, a 24-year-old female courier driver also faced court charged with two counts of contravening a domestic violence order.

The court heard she had been subject to a court order preventing her from contacting or coming within 100m of her ex-partner, but she had gone to the man's unit block to pick up a friend.

Shortly before 10pm on Monday, police received multiple calls for assistance after reports of a disturbance between the man and woman, both of whom were charged with domestic violence offences and faced court on Tuesday.

The woman's application for bail was granted on strict conditions, and Ms Ganesan warned that if she breached her bail, "I'm locking you up".

Another man faced the same court charged with contravening a domestic violence order after his ex-partner, whom he was banned from contacting, arrived at his house.

His lawyer said there was "confusion about who threatened who and who hurt who" during the New Year's Day incident, and the 56-year-old defendant would contest the charge.

The defendant was granted bail on conditions including that he not consume alcohol.

In another unrelated incident, a father pleaded guilty to contravening a domestic violence order by contacting his ex-partner outside the conditions of the protection order that stipulated their only contact be in relation to childcare arrangements.

The 23-year-old, who manages a pub beer garden, was placed on a $500 good behaviour order for four months.

Drowning victim tourist

A man who drowned off Airlie Beach has been revealed as a 50-year-old visitor to the region.

The tragedy happened on Monday afternoon, with the man's body brought ashore at Coral Sea Marina.

Police said the man had a history of heart problems and had previously had heart surgery.

"The effort for retrieval from water to go to shore took a long time," the spokesman said.

The man died at the scene, police said. It had not been confirmed where offshore the man had drowned.

A vessel from Ocean Rafting was chartered to assist with the retrieval.

'Reclusive' couple found dead at home

Carlie Walker
Jessica Grewal

A man and woman found dead in their Hervey Bay unit on Tuesday can be named as "reclusive" retired couple Bryan Monk and Janice Walker.

Ms Walker was battling a serious illness and nearing end-of-life care in the months leading to the grim find.

Police are treating the incident as a suspected murder-suicide, but say it is not yet known whether the pair had made a pact to end their lives.

Police went to the complex on the corner of King and Sandy streets, Urangan, for a welfare check about 12pm and found the bodies of Mr Monk, 70, and Ms Walker, 68, inside.

While police would not be drawn on injuries or if a weapon was found, they have ruled out the use of euthanasia drugs.

Detective Sergeant Mick Polit said a number of items had been collected for DNA testing but would not provide more details about how the couple died.

The grim find was less than a year after another Hervey Bay couple made headlines when it was revealed they made the decision to die at home together.

It's not yet clear whether Ms Walker was interested in Voluntary Assisted Dying or if she would have met the criteria but it can be revealed she had been seriously ill for some time.

It's understood the couple had relocated from interstate about eight years ago and did not have family in the area.

One neighbour, who did not wish to be named, said the couple were often seen sitting together on their balcony.

The alarm was raised after the couple had not been seen outside in a number of days.

Meghan, Harry to remain on outer

Tiffany Bakker

Meghan Markle and Prince Harry won't get the "year of redemption" they hope for in 2024, according to a royal author.

The Duke and Duchess of Sussex are said to be planning a fresh start after backlash last year for their Netflix documentary and Prince Harry's bombshell biography Spare.

"Harry and Meghan have let it be known that they see 2024 as their year of redemption, to which my reaction is good luck with that," royal expert and author Phil Dampier told The Sun. "It's a trite phrase dreamt up by their Hollywood PR people and in reality means very little.

"Actions speak louder than words and the Sussexes need to do things which will convince the public [in Britain and the US] that they want to redeem themselves, not just talk about it."

On Christmas Day, the Sussexes' absence was again strikingly apparent when the rest of the Royals – including King Charles, Prince William and Kate Middleton – attended church at Sandringham. The Sussexes have not spent Christmas with the Royal Family since 2018.

Mr Dampier said the Duke and Duchess of Sussex won't be able to "compete" with the Prince and Princess of Wales.

"I think the penny has finally dropped with them [the Sussexes] that they can never compete with an ancient institution admired around the world, particularly the good will still lingering from the late Queen's reign," Mr Dampier said. "William and Kate have never been more popular and the Sussexes can't hold a candle to them.

"Even in America people are fed up with their constant moaning and want them to do something positive."

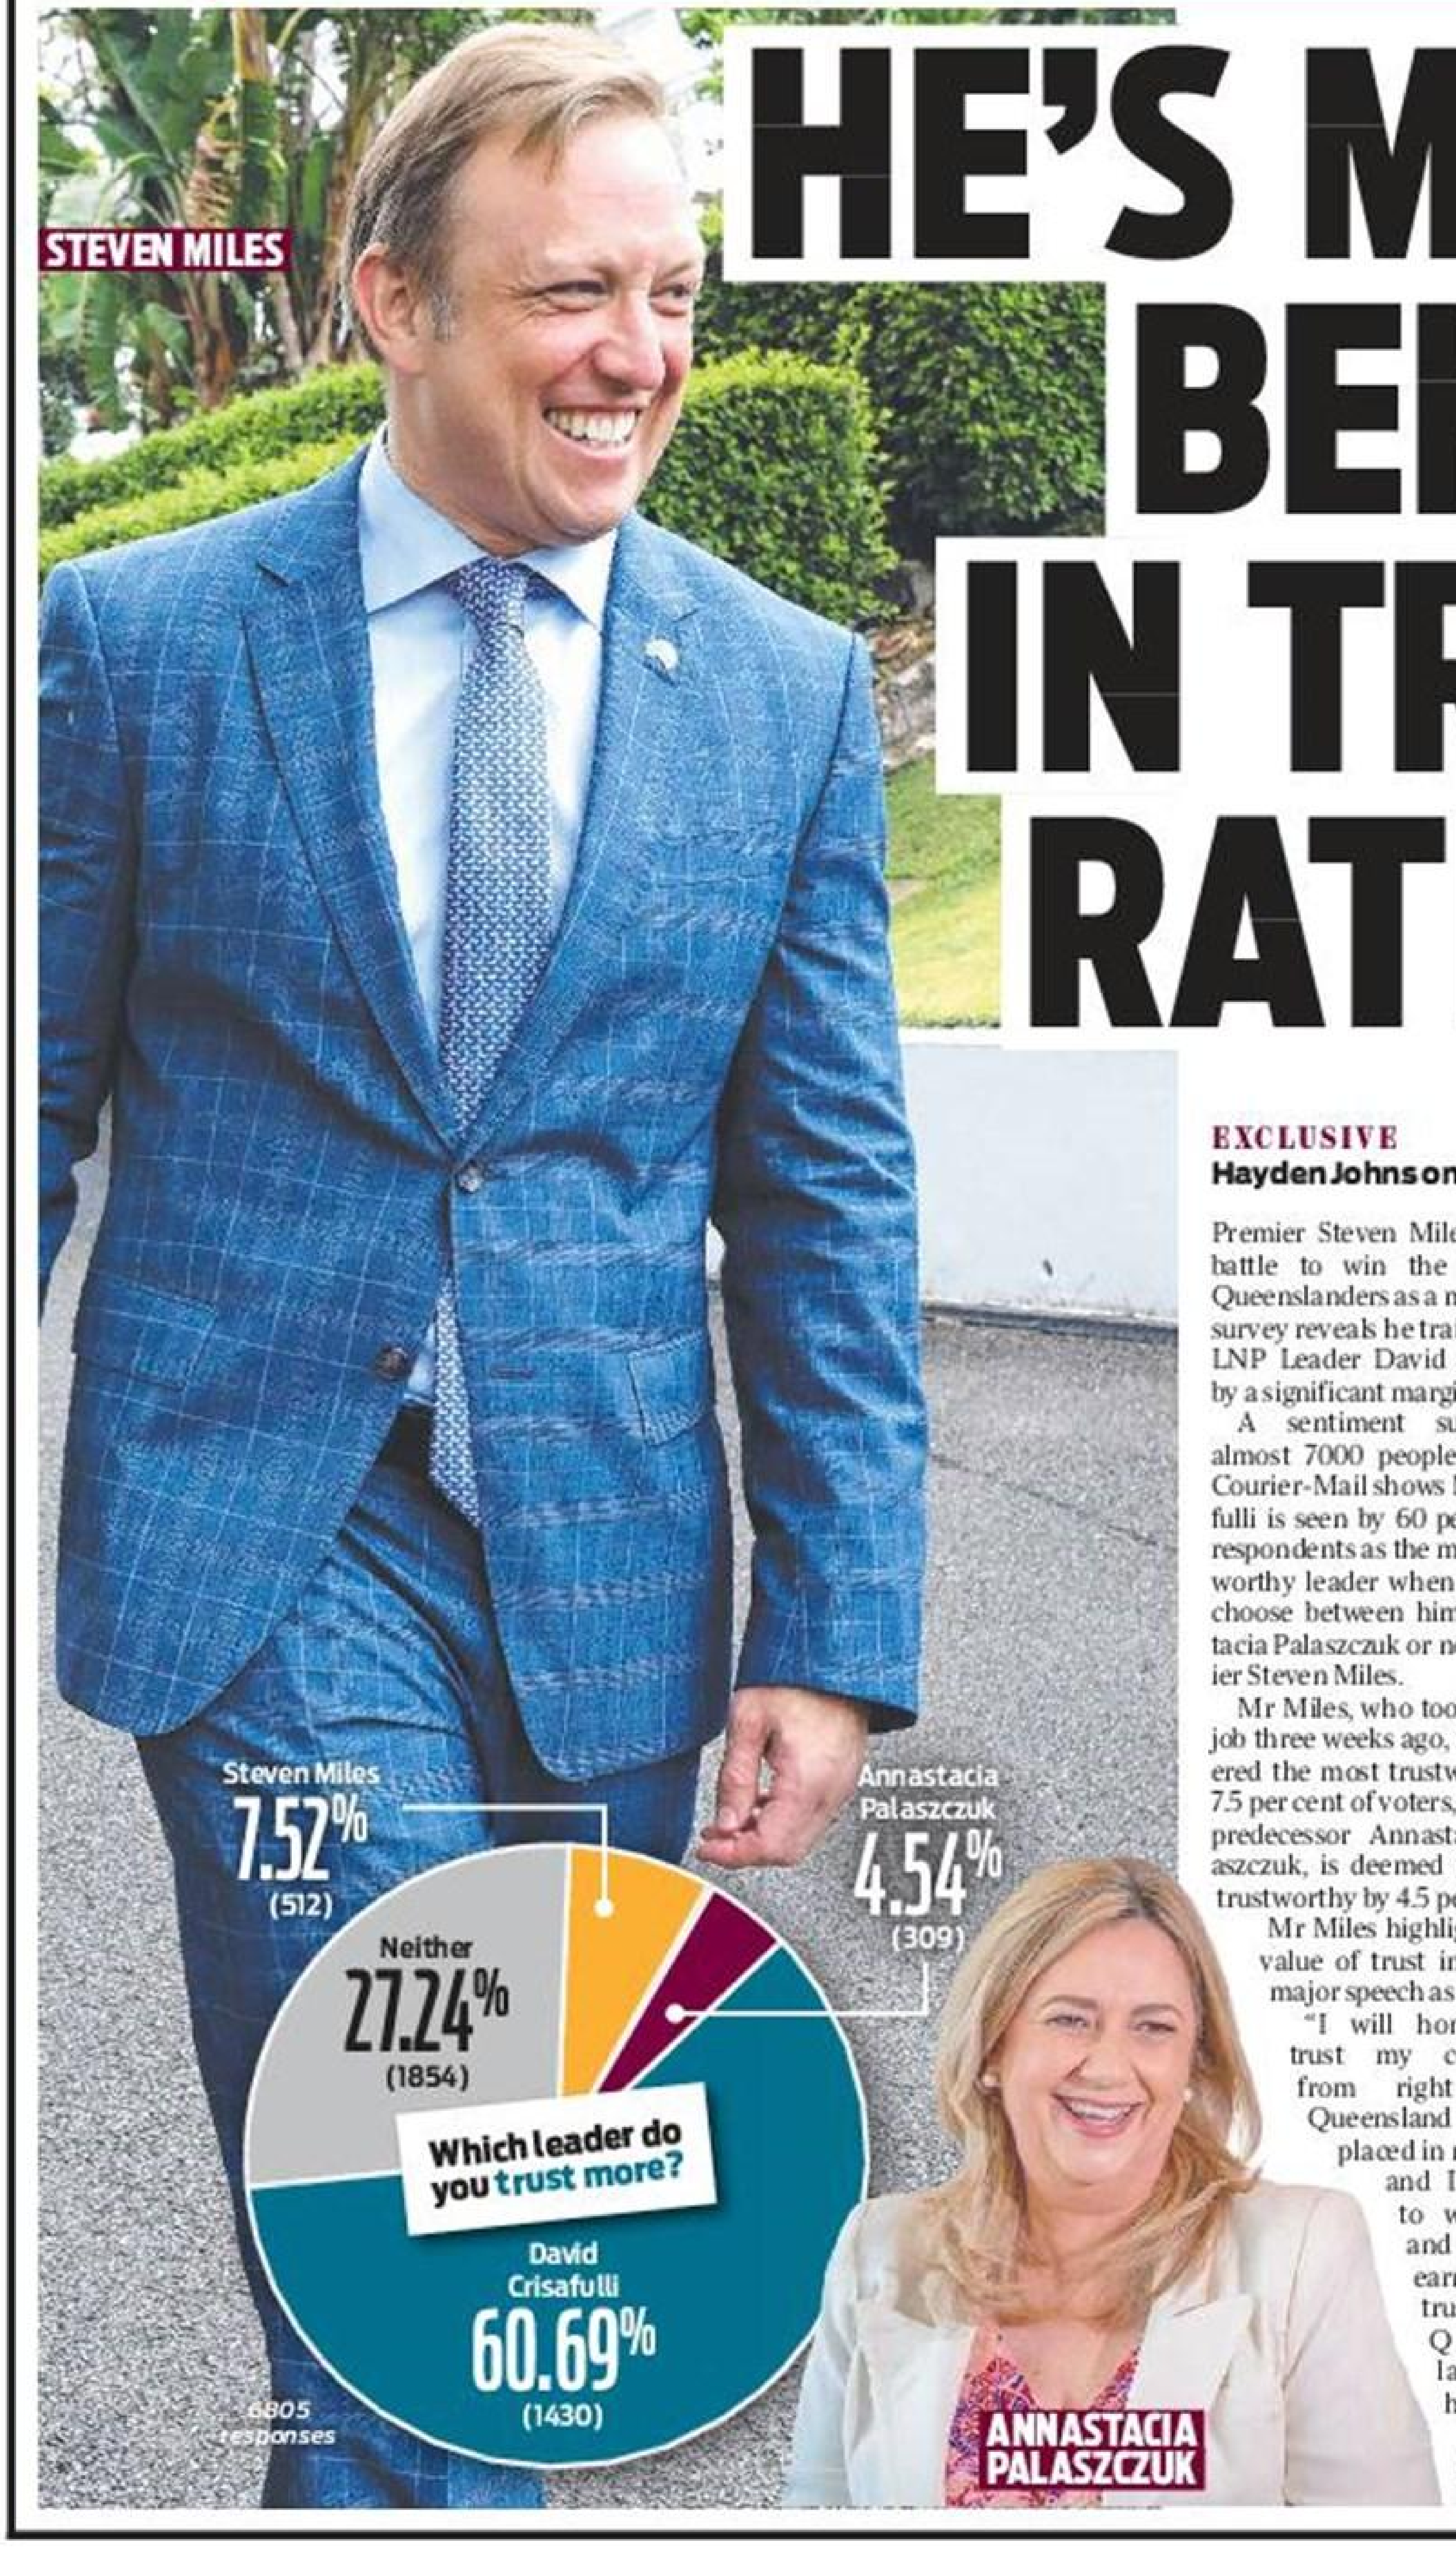
HE'S MILES BEHIND IN TRUST RATINGS



EXCLUSIVE
Hayden Johnson

Premier Steven Miles faces a battle to win the trust of Queenslanders as a major new survey reveals he trails behind LNP Leader David Crisafulli by a significant margin.

A sentiment survey of almost 7000 people for The Courier-Mail shows Mr Crisafulli is seen by 60 per cent of respondents as the most trustworthy leader when asked to choose between him, Annastacia Palaszczuk or new Premier Steven Miles.

Mr Miles, who took the top job three weeks ago, is considered the most trustworthy by 7.5 per cent of voters, while his predecessor Annastacia Palaszczuk, is deemed the most trustworthy by 4.5 per cent.

Mr Miles highlighted the value of trust in his first major speech as Premier.

"I will honour the trust my colleagues from right across Queensland have placed in me today, and I promise to work day and night to earn the trust of Queenslanders," he said.

However, distrust of Queensland's political leaders remains high – 27 per cent of survey respondents voted for none of the three leaders.

The survey revealed trust in local government was highest, with 64 per cent of respondents believing it is the level of government they trust the most.

The state government is considered the most untrustworthy tier of government, with just 11.6 per cent of the vote, while the federal government is most trusted by 24 per cent of Queenslanders polled.

A failure to address youth crime appears to be behind the frustration Queenslanders hold against the state government.

When asked what government responsibility was their highest priority, 56 per cent of people said "tackle youth crime". Reducing energy prices was the next highest pri-

Toad find sparks plea

People are being urged to report exotic pest animal sightings after the discovery of an Asian black-spined toad on Boxing Day.

Agriculture Victoria biosecurity manager Adam Kay said a resident noticed the toad on an afternoon walk in Melbourne.

"The resident collected the toad in a cup and took it home, then reported the discovery via our hotline as a suspected cane toad. We have since confirmed the species as an Asian black-spined toad," Mr Kay said.

The toad was disposed of.

It was the 18th Asian black-spined toad to be found in Victoria since 1999. The species is also listed as a prohibited invasive animal in Queensland, and looks similar to the pest cane toad, but it has raised black bony ridges over its eyes.

Mail delivery texts 'on the way out'

Jared Lynch

E-commerce companies are set to phase out text messages alerting people of when their parcels are likely to be delivered this year, in an attempt to close a common entry point for cyber criminals.

That's the top prediction from Richard Thame, chief executive of Singapore Post-owned Couriers Please, who said more companies were set to switch to Amazon-style app notifications.

"It's very rare for consumers in advanced overseas economies to get a tracking link via SMS," Mr Thame said.

"Clickable links on mobile devices will die off over the next year. Its life has probably been prolonged here in Australia. And I think there's a whole new generation of consumers who are using social platforms, so I think the next stage is that more seamless integration with the various other social platforms as well."

SMiShing, a variant of phishing, is a common tactic cyber criminals use, involving sending simple text messages with an urgent "call to action" such as asking someone where they would like their parcel delivered or to verify an account.

Once a fraudulent link is clicked, hackers can gain access to personal information, and even access to mobile phones, banking apps and email inboxes.

The CBA has warned that once a person clicks on a link, they are often asked to enter personal information, including card numbers and banking passwords.

In the first 10 months of last year, Australians reported more than 11,000 parcel delivery scams to Scamwatch, with more than $720,000 lost.

ority, with 12 per cent saying it was the most important, ahead of reducing surgery waiting times (10 per cent) and reducing debt (8.8 per cent).

For 5 per cent of respondents, creating jobs should be the state government's highest priority.

Mr Miles acknowledged that youth crime in Queensland was "unacceptably high" and said keeping Queenslanders safe was "the government's most important obligation".

"We need to tackle both crime and the causes of crime," he said after becoming Premier.

"We will be a government committed to giving our young people the very best chance in life … a good education and jobs and the right support early in life, but many kids don't have strong role models.

"I can't fix the youth crime problem on my own – we need everyone to step up."

When asked if the state government was doing enough to support small business, a staggering 71 per cent of people polled said no.

Some 8.5 per cent argued the government was doing enough, and 20 per cent said they were unsure.

Expenditure on renewable energy resulted in diverse views in the sentiment survey, with 22 per cent of respondents calling for more to be spent on green energy.

Some 27 per cent of respondents say the current level of spending should be maintained, while 50 per cent think less should be spent on renewable energy.

A $14.2bn pumped hydro project proposed for Borumba, near Gympie, is among the most costly single-energy projects in Queensland in decades.

Mr Miles has also pledged to reduce Queensland emissions by 75 per cent by 2035, with the government's $62bn Energy and Jobs Plan the major blueprint to achieve it.

The plan also includes a renewable energy target of 70 per cent by 2032 and 80 per cent by 2035.

Meanwhile, The Courier-Mail's sentiment survey results show 41 per cent of respondents are worried about the health of the Great Barrier Reef. Almost 60 per cent are not worried.

Bianca barely dressed

Adella Beaini

Controversial rapper Kanye West says his Australian wife Bianca Censori will be wearing even less clothes in 2024, after sharing a series of racy images of the architectural designer to his Instagram account.

In one image, Censori, 28, struck a pose while pairing a micro top with a leather corset bottom and calf-high heeled boots. In another, she modelled a black bikini so tiny that it barely covered her nipples.

The second image was a solo shot of the Australian architect in a marble bathroom looking down at the floor.

"Dropped sumn?" her husband wrote alongside the shot.

A third snap was uploaded by West (pictured above) showing Censori sporting a black micro thong and a teeny and a fuzzy pink bandeau which he captioned: "No pants this year."

Social media users were mostly critical of the posts, labelling them "gross" and a "mess". Others argued that West was trying too hard to mould Censori into his ex-wife, Kim Kardashian, saying: "He's creating the new @kimkardashian," "Kim from Wish" and "Rebound Kim."

Exy Aussie bill for X

A key Twitter company in Singapore may be shut down by a court for failing to pay about $76,200 in Australian internet bills after Elon Musk took control.

Aussie ISP Vocus claims to be owed the money for services to Twitter Asia Pacific Pte Ltd, in Singapore, since September 2022.

Mr Musk took over Twitter in October 2022, and Vocus claims Twitter Asia Pacific stopped paying its bills the same month.

On December 21, Vocus asked the court to declare Twitter Asia Pacific insolvent and wind it up.

Vanda Carson

A "ring card girl" has gone to court in a bid to build a wedding and function centre next to "core koala habitat" after the council knocked her back.

On December 22, Angel Crowden, one of four co-owners of a property in Capalaba, filed an appeal in the Planning and Environment Court in a bid to overturn Redland City Council's (RCC) December 20 decision to refuse plans to build a function centre.

The council told Mrs Crowden the proposal was "not small scale" and was not "for a community service function" and would impact the area's amenity.

The refusal revealed Mrs Crowden had proposed to build an "acoustic barrier" but the council submitted this "will restrict movement of fauna" between the acreage and "core koala habitat" north of the site.

But Mrs Crowden states in her appeal that the barrier "is not proposed" to run the whole length, rather it would extend 2m east of the north access door to the wedding centre, to allow animals to migrate.

Outside court, Mrs Crowden said the barn would be built outside the koala habitat and she was "concerned about" ensuring they were not affected.

Her appeal states the development application should have been approved because the centre would fill an unmet demand in the area.

The proposed development would host parties for up to 80 people, with a maximum of one event a day in a "barn like building" with a gross floor area of 250 sqm on the 0.96ha site.

She states that noise from weddings and engagement parties won't bother neighbours because they will "limit the volume of music played" and will only let 20 or less people on the outdoor deck, reducing to 10 until 10pm then closing the outdoor areas at 10pm.

Mrs Crowden has owned the home for five years together with husband Cameron and her parents Mark and Rachael, where they all live together.

The family purchased the property for $900,000 in August 2018, records show. No defence has been filed and no date has been set for hearing.

‘Vigilantes’ charged

‘Illegal citizen’s arrest’ on boys held with ratchet straps

Peter Carruthers

Alleged vigilantes accused of making an illegal citizen’s arrest by chasing down, bashing and tying up three boys with makeshift handcuffs after the teens trespassed on private property have been charged.

Detectives from the Tablelands Child Protection and Investigation Unit have charged two men following an incident in Mareeba on December 23, 2023.

At about 5pm officers were called to the intersection of Beams and Reynolds streets in an industrial area of the far north Queensland town following reports that three boys aged 12 to 14 had been trespassing on a nearby property.

Police allege the men, both from Biboohra, had chased the boys and assaulted them before tying them up with makeshift handcuffs.

Later, following an investigation by the Tablelands Child Protection and Investigation Unit, detectives laid a series of charges against the alleged vigilantes.

Police have confirmed some of the concerning claims made in a viral TikTok video about the incident. It’s understood police will allege ratchet straps were used to bind the hands of the three boys.

Racial tensions have run high in Mareeba since the police shooting of Indigenous man Aubrey Donahue earlier in 2023.

In December the situation reached boiling point when an angry mob took to the street and threw rocks at police vehicles in unrest stemming from unresolved tensions that have simmered since the death on March 31, 2023.

A 36-year-old Biboohra man was charged with three counts each of common assault and deprivation of liberty. He was refused police bail and is due to appear in the Mareeba Magistrates Court on January 22.

A 27-year-old Biboohra man was charged with three counts each of common assault and deprivation of liberty. He is due to appear in the Mareeba Magistrates Court on January 22.

Detectives are appealing for public help for information in relation to this incident.

The incident happened in an industrial estate and (right) a TikTok video about the incident went viral.

Looking good at the finish, feline better

Genevieve Holding

Gift bags and hugs were exchanged at Hobart’s Franklin Wharf as the final yacht in the 2023 Sydney to Hobart race Sylph VI and its crew docked on Wednesday.

But the gifts weren’t for the crew.

Yacht owner Robert Williams’ cat Oli has taken the yachting community by storm as the first cat in the Sydney to Hobart, gaining the feline a horde of fans at the Hobart waterfront.

The 10-year-old cat took the 628-nautical mile journey like a champ according to his owner, despite rough sailing across the Bass Strait with the crew, co-skipper Chris Warren.

While they finished after the target of New Year’s Day, Mr Williams said the result of seven days and 19 hours was good for one of the oldest boats in the race fleet.

“It’s an older and obviously slower boat and with the conditions we got, light winds and stronger headwinds, it doesn’t suit the performance profile of the boat,” he said.

“Finishing a Sydney to Hobart, even if you finish last, is an incredible feeling.”

Arriving in Hobart, he and Mr Warren were shocked to see the fanfare for maritime moggy Oli.

“The crowds singing Oli a song on the finish line was really special,” Mr Warren said. “We had heard a few things, but had little connectivity offshore.”

CHARLIES MARKET IS CLOSED.
Thank you for your support, best wishes for 2024

A signs outside Everton Park business Charlie’s Fruit Market, which has closed suddenly.

Mystery as fruit market closes

Matty Holdsworth

A famous Brisbane fruit and vegetable store with an online following in the tens of thousands has mysteriously closed after more than 20 years.

Charlie’s Fruit Market at Everton Park, famed for its late trading hours, has suddenly closed, leaving customers shocked and saddened.

“Charlies (sic) market is closed. Thanks for all your support, best wishes for 2024,” a sign on the front of the building read.

The market’s phone number rings out while its website is “in maintenance mode”.

The business had been trading through several owners since the early 2000 and had amassed an online following in the tens of thousands.

The owner of the business and building complex, Charlie Scuderi, declined to comment on the circumstances surrounding the closure.

Mr Scuderi is understood to have taken over the business about three years ago and refurbished the market into a “modern-day health hub” that complemented other companies in the complex.

Staff at neighbouring businesses said they had been left puzzled by the sudden closure and said it was sad it had to close.

Former customers also expressed disappointment on the fruit market’s closure on Facebook.

It comes amid warnings that the retail sector will face increasing pressure this year as the full impact of “aggressive” interest rate rises flush through Queensland’s economy.

Tough seal of approval

As one of the top predators roaming Antarctica, the sizeable southern elephant seal has its fair selection of the menu, but it turns out they won’t just eat anything and everything.

According to new research led by UNSW Sydney, male southern elephant seals have their own favourite foods, and they like to stick with them.

In other words, they’re very fussy eaters.

“They could have the pick of the buffet and yet each male southern elephant seal eats a lot of the same food, which is just a fraction of what’s on offer,” says lead author of the research, Andrea Cormack.

Storm over port strike action

Jack Quail

Businesses and the Coalition have called on the Albanese Government to urgently intervene in strikes in the nation’s ports, which they claim threaten to worsen the cost of living crunch.

The industrial action, led by the Maritime Union of Australia (MUA), at container terminals in Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane and Fremantle operated by DP World, one of the country’s largest stevedores, has resulted in a backlog of some 45,000 containers and is expected to cost the Australian economy more than $20 million a day, according to employer organisation estimates.

While the stevedore is seeking to update its rostering arrangement, the union has participated in industrial action since October, undertaking work stoppages and 24-hour strikes, in a bid to win a pay rise worth 8 per cent a year for its members after its last workplace deal expired.

The stoppages have meant imports from white goods to medicines and exports such as red meat and fresh fruit – are facing 10 to 12-day delays.

EES Shipping managing director Brian Hack said: “This is no longer just about DP World and the MUA, businesses are being significantly impacted”.

Daring strike on evil leader

Andrew Koubaridis and Tiffany Bakker

Hamas's deputy leader was killed in an Israeli drone strike in Beirut as Israel's war against Palestinian militants reached Lebanon's capital.

Saleh al-Aruri was killed along with his bodyguards in the strike by Israel, which vowed to destroy Hamas after the movement's unprecedented October 7 attacks.

Aruri, one of the founders of Hamas' military wing, had headed the group's presence in the West Bank and had been a target for Israel even before the attacks that killed 1200 Israelis.

A billboard depicting Saleh al-Aruri in Gaza.

Israel has previously announced the killing in Gaza of Hamas commanders and officials during the war but Aruri is the most high-profile figure to be killed.

Israeli army spokesman Daniel Hagari did not directly comment on Aruri's killing but said the military was "highly prepared for any scenario" in its aftermath.

Lebanese state media reported the strike hit a Hamas office in Beirut's southern suburbs, a stronghold of Lebanon's Hezbollah movement, which is a Hamas ally and backed by Iran.

Hamas TV also said Israel had killed Aruri in Lebanon, and Lebanese media reported a total of seven people were killed in the attack.

Hamas said the killing would not lead to its defeat, while Hezbollah vowed Aruri's death would not go "unpunished".

Hezbollah called it "a serious assault on Lebanon ... and a dangerous development in the course of the war".

Lebanese Prime Minister Najib Mikati condemned the killing and said it "aims to draw Lebanon" further into the Israel-Hamas war.

In a call with Israeli war cabinet member Benny Gantz after the strike, French President Emmanuel Macron urged Israel to "avoid any escalatory attitude, particularly in Lebanon".

Since the conflict began on October 8, fighting has been concentrated a few kilometres from the border but, on several occasions, Israel's air force hit Hezbollah targets deeper in Lebanon.

Earlier in the day, Hezbollah said its fighters carried out several attacks along the Lebanon-Israel border targeting Israeli military posts.

It comes as Israeli troops announced they had also killed a Hamas commander who helped lead the October 7 terror attack.

Adil Mismah, the Nukhba Company Commander of the city of Deir al-Balah, was "eliminated," Israeli Defense Forces said via social media.

Mismah had led terrorists into the Kibbutz Kissufim and ordered other gunmen to ravage the communities of Nirim and Be'eri, according to The Jerusalem Post.

The commander was slain in an air strike directed by Israeli ground troops, officials said.

Israel has said its war in the disputed territory will last for months to come, resisting international calls for a prolonged ceasefire.

More than 21,800 people in Gaza have been killed, according to the Hamas-run Gaza Health Ministry.

Israel has claimed that more than 8000 of those are terrorists. Neither side has provided evidence to back up their death toll claims.

Questions over who cleared Japanese jet to land

TOKYO: Japanese investigators are trying to discover how the country's main airport suffered a catastrophic collision between a coast guard plane and a passenger jet – as the national carrier appeared to point the finger at the control tower.

Five people on the coast guard aircraft died but all 379 passengers and crew on the jet escaped to safety minutes before the Japan Airlines Airbus was engulfed in flames. It took eight hours to extinguish the fires on both planes.

The captain of the coast guard plane – which had been carrying aid to the New Year's Day earthquake zone and so was an unscheduled, special flight – was its lone survivor but suffered serious injuries.

Government officials have pledged to investigate how the incident happened in a country that had not seen a serious commercial aviation accident for decades.

Asked whether the plane had secured landing permission from air traffic control, officials at Japan Airlines said: "Our understanding is that it was given."

That suggests the mistake was made by the control tower. But JAL and the government declined to comment directly on exchanges between flight controllers and the two planes, citing the ongoing investigation – and leading to questions as to who was at fault.

In a recording from Haneda's control tower apparently taken in the moments before the collision, available on a site that broadcasts live air traffic signals, a voice can be heard advising JAL's flight to "continue approach".

Trump fighting to get back on ballot

WASHINGTON: Former US president Donald Trump has filed an appeal against a ruling by the top election official in Maine that would keep him off the presidential primary ballot in the northeastern state.

Maine last week joined Colorado in barring Mr Trump from appearing on the primary ballot because of his role in the January 6, 2021 assault on the Capitol by his supporters.

Woke Harvard boss forced out the door

NEW YORK: Harvard University president Claudine Gay has resigned after criticism of her handling of anti-Semitism and her alleged plagiarism – making her the shortest-serving president in the college's history.

During an appearance last month before a congressional committee investigating anti-Semitism on US, she struggled to answer if calling for the "genocide of Jews" would violate the university's rules on bullying.

Mickey Mouse's star turn as a mad killer

LOS ANGELES: Horror movies featuring Mickey Mouse as the killer have been announced within a day of an early version of Disney's mascot entering the public domain.

On January 1, the 1928 version of Mickey Mouse in the film Steamboat Willie became available for public use.

The first movie out will be Mickey's Mouse Trap, a slasher movie featuring a killer wearing the 1928-Mickey mask. Another film will feature a sadistic mouse terrorising a group of ferry passengers.

Tennis ace is serving it up to the Russians

KYIV: The world's best tennis players are in Australia for the Open, but former quarter-finalist Alexandr Dolgopolov is a world away from the hotels and the fans – fighting against the Russian invasion of Ukraine.

The 35-year-old is back in Kyiv awaiting a new deployment after serving on the frontline for several months defending his homeland against the Russian invaders.

He admits his family "were unhappy" at his joining up in 2022. "It is my home so I think you have to do something," Dolgopolov said.

Families angered by parole failures

There are few people who would argue against the merits of a properly functioning parole system.

Implemented as it should be, it allows people convicted of criminal offences to be released into the community with varying levels of supervision and support that both aids in their rehabilitation and keeps the public safe.

It's an added layer of protection that helps prisoners transition from life behind bars to safely reintegrate with the community and become contributing members of society.

It also acts as an extra incentive to stay on the straight and narrow.

This is why revelations about widespread failings within such a crucial pillar of the criminal justice system this week are so concerning.

Lawyers, politicians and victims of crime have called for an inquiry into the state's parole system, describing it as "broken".

The story of Jack Beasley's grieving family being failed by the Parole Board has seemingly opened the floodgates, with other victims of crime coming forward to share their stories.

Already mourning the anniversary of Jack's death and dreading another Christmas without him, his parents were told on December 18 that they would be given 21 days to make a submission about his killer's parole bid.

But four days later they received an email saying a decision had already been made to release the killer, depriving them of the opportunity to have their say.

Jack was just 17 when he was fatally stabbed in the chest in December 2019 during a night out in Surfers Paradise with friends.

Two people were convicted over his death, including a 15-year-old boy who pleaded guilty and admitted to having inflicted the wound.

But it was the 17-year-old who instigated the attack who was recently granted parole after serving four years of a seven-year manslaughter sentence.

The Parole Board made an extraordinary backflip on Tuesday, cancelling the killer's parole after Jack's family spoke out about the bungle.

But their story has given a voice to other families who feel they have also been let down by the parole system in recent years.

They include the family of Harry Payne, who were told the dangerous driver who killed their son would be released without warning or consultation.

It's an issue that appears to be on the radar of new Corrective Services Minister Nikki Boyd who has sought a briefing with the Parole Board in the wake of the Beasley bungle.

It's a good move by the new minister and we applaud her for it.

All eyes will be on the outcome.

Stage set for fitting Warner farewell

With much of Australia on holidays at the beach, there was a huge sigh of relief yesterday when, as we turned on televisions to watch the cricket, we were greeted with blue skies at the SCG.

Sydney's New Year Test is often plagued by bad weather, but yesterday we were treated to a gripping day of cricket and another superlative performance by skipper Pat Cummins.

Already this year he has lifted the World Test Championship mace and the 50-over World Cup, while retaining the Ashes, in admittedly controversial circumstances.

However, on his return to Australia he has taken his game to new heights, taking 10 wickets in the Boxing Day Test and another five yesterday.

So dominant has he been this summer that former English captain and Fox Sports commentator Michael Vaughan yesterday stated that by the time he retires, Cummins will be regarded as Australia's second greatest cricketer.

"I honestly think he's that good that we'll be talking about him in a few years' time as being just behind Sir Don Bradman as the greatest Australian cricketer," Vaughan said.

One player who isn't in that conversation, but is in the running for most entertaining Australian cricketer of all time, is David Warner.

The bullish opener is playing his last Test, and, having survived the one over Pakistan bowled to Australia – when he had every right to defer to his partner Usman Khawaja – is set to make a real statement today in front of his home crowd.

Warner has been no stranger to controversy and admittedly has not been in the greatest form over the past few years, but as the song says, you don't know what you've got 'til it's gone.

The Australian team that takes the field at the Gabba on January 25 for the Second Test against West Indies just won't have the same intimidation factor.

WE HAVE ALL LOST BAGS

Some may think it a comical situation with retiring cricketer David Warner (pictured) making a heartfelt appeal for the return of his backpack, containing his treasured baggy green caps, which has gone AWOL (C-M, Jan 3).

Many travellers have had damaged, missing items, lost luggage or parcels ending up in remote countries or outposts and have been resigned to never seeing them again.

No extra help to find these.

But most learn quickly, if it is of value to them, to either leave it at home or put it in their carry-on luggage.

One hopes it will be a misunderstanding and Warner's backpack will emerge unscathed and returned to its rightful owner.

Only cheeky Warner with his boyish grin could reveal his plight in the public arena.

I foresee a children's book, written by Warner, on the journey for the hard-earned cricketing baggy green with a favourable outcome, as many lessons can be learnt from this and it will take more than a missing cap for Warner to be stumped out.

Six-day school week

I totally agree with the nearly 90 per cent of parents opposing the four-day school week idea (C-M, Jan 3).

Teachers are already overwhelmed with the overcrowded curriculums, so to teach these in four days is impossible.

So, perhaps a six-day week could be an option.

Parents would be pleased to have "free" time and if the teachers were to get double pay on this day, they might be on side with this notion.

However, I can't imagine many students wanting to do this, unless it could be used as a "homework day" which could release the stress that homework causes.

Lesley Brandis, Camp Hill

If the state government wants to address staffing problems in Queensland schools, it would do better to address the decline in male teacher numbers, rather than to shorten the school week.

Men have fallen from nearly half to just over a quarter of teachers in the last 40 years, a fact former education minister Grace Grace repeatedly dodged when asked by Nick Dametto from Katter's Australian Party in parliamentary Estimates.

Hopefully, new minister Di Farmer will demonstrate more commitment to recruiting teachers from the whole population, rather than just half of it.

Rhys Bosley, Forest Lake

No room for mistakes

It is good that the Parole Board Queensland has cancelled the parole of Jack Beasley's killer, as a "mistake" had been made in not giving Jack's parents a chance to respond to the killer's bid for freedom (C-M, Jan 3).

How was such a mistake made in the first place?

There is much angst in the community about youth crime and we are constantly being told it is being addressed, so it doesn't inspire confidence when proper process is not followed.

Roseanne Schneider, Toowoomba

One of the roles of the Parole Board Queensland when considering a parole is "community safety is always its highest priority".

In doing the above, PBQ should have properly consulted with the victim's family.

Surely when making the final decision, the board president has crossed all the "t"s and dotted all the "i"s.

How then did the board miss consulting the victim's family?

It makes you wonder how many more mistakes they have made in granting parole.

Ken Grigg, Warner

With all of the complaints over the years of early release on parole of quite dangerous people, would it not be worth considering making a condition of parole that if there is any reoffending whatsoever which might entail a custodial sentence, that the offender be forced to spend the balance of the original term, as well as the penalty for the subsequent offence, on a consecutive rather than cumulative sentence?

The requirement to serve out the original term should be mandatory.

This would remove repeat offenders from the public for longer periods.

I am sure many of us would also be interested to know how many juvenile offenders were under the control and supervision of government agencies at the time of committing the relevant offences.

Clive Schultz, Herston

Power to the workers

While I sympathise with the many householders who have lost power as a result of recent untoward weather, we need to be careful whom we blame (C-M, Jan 3).

While the state government is ultimately responsible, we realise that the number of government employees in the power supply game is insufficient to deal with disasters.

And why should it be any different as the extra needed could not be guaranteed work in normal times?

Many possibly have no power at their own homes yet are putting others ahead of their own needs.

SES workers are also on the job 24/7 to deal with other issues and our thoughts are with them and their understanding families while they too often put their lives on the line.

Prioritising jobs is itself a challenge when the queue is so long.

These are the workers who should be rewarded with bonuses, not those public servants being unfairly remunerated for sitting at a desk.

Life is so often unfair.

Ken Johnston, Rochedale South

Blame drug dealers

I refer to your front-page story "Crash pilot coke shock" (C-M, Jan 3).

It is a shame that some of the anger and outrage directed at the pilot of the crashed helicopter isn't focused on those who supplied the cocaine found in his blood.

These scumbags profit from the misery of others – the more misery, the more profit.

And they're laughing all the way to the (tax-free) bank.

Drugs have been proven to be one of the causes behind most of the crime committed in Australia and worldwide, yet we as a society seem to treat drug dealing, particularly at the retail level, as petty crime.

Suppliers, more often than not, are given fines or suspended sentences – a slap on the wrist, disproportionate to the damage they cause.

We need to get serious about this problem.

The judiciary need to impose sentences commensurate with the damage drug addiction causes.

And every convicted drug dealer needs to be referred to the ATO for a thorough audit of their tax returns.

Covid and kids

Crispin Walters (Letters, Jan 2) seeks to draw a thread between children not wanting to go to school and government overreach in dealing with Covid-19.

It would appear that Walters does not consider Covid-19 a serious health risk for all.

The Actuaries Institute showed that Covid-19 was the third leading cause of death in Australia in 2022.

Yes, the Swedes did keep their schools open, acting on the presumption that Covid-19 has the least impact on school children.

Unfortunately, they are still excellent transmitters of the virus and this became obvious as the Swedish medicos and government set off on their pursuit of "herd" immunity.

As expected, the vast majority of those who became infected and died were aged over 70, obviously regarded as "collateral damage" in pursuit of the greater good.

BRETT LETHBRIDGE IS ON LEAVE

Building resilience is the key for small businesses

Bruce Billson

When a bushfire, storm, flood or other natural disaster strikes, small business owners are often the first to volunteer to fight fires, lay sandbags, assist with evacuations and help with the clean-up.

Just like the businesses they run, they are the lifeblood of our communities. Yet the overwhelming majority of our small and family businesses do not have a current disaster preparation plan as we head into what is already becoming a challenging summer.

An inquiry by my office found only one in four have a current business continuity plan. Natural disasters can be devastating for small and family businesses — either their business is directly damaged or wiped-out or they are an indirect victim who has survived the disaster only to have no customers because of the impact on their town or region.

Taking simple steps to be better prepared, sensible risk mitigation action and bolstering resilience can help small and family businesses to get back on their feet quicker.

Some 97 per cent of money spent by governments on disasters is after the event and only three per cent is on preparedness.

I urge small and family businesses to get prepared. This can be as simple as ensuring your record keeping is up to date and that critical information is at hand and, where possible, digitised so you can retrieve it if your business is destroyed.

Do you have the contact details for your customers, suppliers, staff, accountant and other important people in a safe place?

Are your payments to relevant bodies such as insurers, lenders and the Tax Office up to date?

Do you have copies of relevant accounts, passwords and backups of important operational data?

Would it be feasible to continue operating from another location?

As part of our Small Business Natural Disaster Preparedness and Resilience Inquiry, we recommended the creation of an opt-in "My Business Record" to allow a small business to digitally store all relevant government-held and other vital information it might need after a disaster.

It is clear from our work that preparation is key to small and family businesses building resilience and coming through natural disasters in the best possible shape.

It is equally clear they cannot do this on their own and when a natural disaster strikes, certainty of response and certainty of support must be provided.By this we mean small business owners should automatically be engaged in local place-based planning and support services and be elevated and 'front of mind' in disaster response, recovery and funding arrangements.

This must include indirectly affected businesses.

We believe a business hub should be established to provide a single point from which to seek help from government and non-government agencies. And we strongly recommend a "tell-us-once" triage system should be adopted to save small business owners the trauma and time associated with repeating their story.

In the aftermath of a disaster, it is important to have ongoing support. So, when a small business receives an Australian Government grant, we recommend an additional amount should be made available six to nine months later for a "business health check".

> “ In the aftermath of a disaster, it is important to have ongoing support.

We also need an integrated response to disaster risk management for identified disaster prone areas that incorporates priority access to mitigation expenditure, co-ordinated planning across levels of government, infrastructure hardening, interest-free loans for asset and activity protection and relocation schemes and possible use of a dedicated reinsurance vehicle.

And in keeping with our small business owners and employees being regular volunteers, we have backed the idea of a government subsidy to be available when workers in a small business are called out for volunteer work for an extended period or a business is required to scale back operations because of volunteer activities.

Sadly, too often we have seen how natural disasters can cause lasting harm to the enterprising women and men building businesses, employing local community members, and contributing to the Australian economy.

Small business creates vitality in our communities, employs two out of every five people with a private sector job and contributes one-third of our GDP, so it is absolutely worth building its resilience.

Be wary of who is an expert

Gary Martin

As we step into 2024, a year guaranteed to be full of complexities and uncertainties, the heightened demand for genuine expertise to guide us through our challenges will become even more important.

The dilemma we face is that too many people are in a rush to claim their expertise, making it increasingly difficult to discern genuine or real experts from those who are still learning the ropes. In today's era of digital self-promotion and personal branding, the term "expert" is thrown around like confetti at a wedding celebration.

So-called experts are everywhere. Individuals self-assign this once prestigious title along with others like coach, consultant and specialist to impress others, attract fresh business prospects, gain speaking opportunities or boost their book sales. A novice cook who decides to share a few recipes on a blog declares they are a culinary expert. A traveller who describes his/her own limited experiences on a social media platform promotes himself/herself as a world travel consultant. A person who successfully quits smoking for a few months positions as a "quit smoking coach".

There's also the individual who completes a coding bootcamp and subsequently calls herself/himself a software development guru, the parent who has raised four children who markets himself/herself as a parenting expert and the former manager who proudly identifies as a management specialist.

Put simply, being an expert has become a trendy label, applied to anyone with a hint of knowledge.

Becoming an expert requires substantial education or training, thousands of hours of practice, a deep understanding of the subject and a desire to continue learning to stay up-to-date.

Some also regard experts to be effective communicators who can explain complex concepts to others, making their knowledge accessible and understandable.

You can't claim the expert title yourself. Only when others label you an expert does it become a reality. As we start a brand new year, if you are finding yourself in need of guidance or expertise, look out for those who embody the principles of unwavering dedication, continuous learning and a proven track record.

In a world awash with self-proclaimed experts, let's champion those who have truly earned their stripes and, in doing so, let us collectively raise the standard in 2024.

Board renewal
IN

ARI MERVIS
Chairman-elect

PETER MARGIN
Nominated director

PETER HEARL
Chairman

BRUCE MATHIESON JR
Director

The civil war that engulfed the board of liquor and pubs giant Endeavour Group late last year has finally claimed the job of its under-siege chairman Peter Hearl.

Board director Bruce Mathieson Jr is also stepping down, in a board restructure aimed at putting the nastiness of 2023 behind it. The slated departure of Mr Mathieson Jr comes after the public battle before last year's annual general meeting that saw his father, Bruce Mathieson Sr, support a rebel candidate for the board and launch a savage verbal personal attack on Endeavour chief executive Steve Donohue and Mr Hearl.

As Endeavour's largest shareholder with a stake of 15 per cent, the Mathiesons will still be extended a boardroom seat. Mr Mathieson Jr's resignation will take effect on June 30, or at an earlier date if agreed between him and the board.

Endeavour owns 1700 retail chains under its Dan Murphy's and BWS banners as well as a network of 354 pubs – created from the pub's empire owned by the Mathieson family.

On Wednesday, the group said Peter Margin and Ari Mervis have been selected to join the board as new directors to fill casual vacancies, subject to probity and the receipt of regulatory approvals.

Mr Mervis, who is also the new chairman-elect, is increasingly being seen as the director companies turn to help restructure boards and seal rifts.

He was recently appointed as chairman of department store owner Myer.

Mr Mervis is also the chairman of McPherson's, which has gone through its own shareholder and operational turmoil. Mr Margin has extensive corporate and boardroom experience as former chief executive of Goodman Fielder and National Foods and is chairman of both Bega Cheese and Golf Australia.

Endeavour's internal troubles erupted last year in the lead-up to its AGM, when rebel candidate Bill Wavish, a former Woolworths supermarkets boss and executive chairman of Myer, put his hand up to run for the board and won support from Mr Mathieson Sr.

The AGM turned into a nasty public spectacle as former Woolworths boss Roger Corbett swung his support behind Mr Wavish and launched withering attacks on Endeavour, its board, CEO and chairman and was joined by the Mathieson camp in the brawl.

It also fuelled a proxy battle as the warring camps lobbied for support. Mr Wavish eventually lost the shareholder vote at the rowdy AGM but it left Endeavour's board in open conflict.

It is believed that negotiations for a peace deal started at the end of the AGM.

Mr Hearl will oversee the new director appointments and intends to retire from the board after Mr Mervis obtains all necessary regulatory approvals and an orderly transition to become the new chairman, anticipated to be by the end of April.

Mr Hearl has served as Endeavour's inaugural chairman since 2021, leading the company through its demerger from Woolworths as a standalone liquor and pubs giant.

"We welcome Ari and Peter to the Endeavour Group," Mr Hearl said. "Our focus on a deliberate and comprehensive process for board renewal has secured experienced and respected company directors.

"Ari and Peter's nomination completes the first phase of our board renewal process and future director appointments will be overseen by the new chairman-elect."

In his ASX statement, Mr Hearl acknowledged Mr Mathieson Jr's contribution to the business.

Mr Mathieson Jr in turn said he was confident that Mr Margin and Mr Mervis' skills and experience would contribute significantly to the board and the company.

Canva draws a $1.48bn payday

Jared Lynch

Longtime investors and employees at Canva are set for a $US1bn ($1.48bn) payday, with the company close to finalising a deal on the sale of a tranche of shares ahead of a potential public listing.

The Australian-owned digital design and visual communication platform won't raise any money from the deal, which is set to value the company at $US26bn and involve early investors and staff selling stock to new investors, according to US reports.

Co-founder Cliff Obrecht

The news comes after a similar deal the company struck last August that involved Blackbird selling a 3 per cent stake to US investors. A Canva spokesman could not be reached for comment.

Cameron Adams, Melanie Perkins and Cliff Obrecht founded the company a decade ago. Its design templates, which proliferate across businesses, school projects and social media accounts, are easily identified by their playful fonts and colourful palettes.

One of Australia's biggest success stories, Canva's $US25.5bn valuation is down 35 per cent from a peak of $US40bn in September 2021 but Mr Obrecht said last August that its valuation was "solid" compared to other software companies. Canva is expected to list on the US market within the next 18 months.

Cyber attack execs' worst fear

Matt Bell

Cyber threats are more likely to keep Australia's business leaders up at night than any other factor as record levels of immigration ease fears about finding workers.

The "Keeping us up at Night" survey of 319 senior executives at private businesses by professional services firm KPMG Australia revealed leaders are also concerned about regulation and cost control issues as they look to combat a high inflationary environment.

Cyber threats were the main concern for 43 per cent of executives after the corporate world was rocked by a attacks at DP World, Latitude Financial and Optus in recent years.

"High-profile attacks and outages over the last 12 months have clearly reinforced the importance of cyber in executive minds and boardrooms," KPMG chief executive Andrew Yates said.

"It's a heightened concern, not only the continuing increasing threat and always needing to evolve your own risk management, but also an awareness of the impact of issues when they occur."

Cyber risks were only the fourth top priority in 2023 but recent high-profile cyber attacks and outages affecting large numbers of people and businesses have seen the issue shift up the business agenda.

KPMG chief executive Andrew Yates

KPMG observed that given most executives do not come from a technology or cyber background, there may also be a fear of the unknown compared with challenges which are in their comfort zone.

"(Cyber) has elevated itself in boardrooms and executive rooms around the country," Mr Yates said. "Every company is investing an incredible lot in cyber."

The report found business leaders were less concerned at finding talent, with just 42 per cent citing it as an issue, compared with 77 per cent who said it was the biggest challenge in 2023 and 69 per cent in 2022. This comes amid the arrival of 500,000 immigrants into Australia.

The third most important issue for the next 12 months (41 per cent) was dealing with regulations, while cost controls in an inflationary environment came joint fourth on 38 per cent.

Aussie stocks shaky after cracks appear

Australian stocks had their worst day in over three months as cracks appeared on Wall Street after strong gains in the past two months.

A day after hitting an over-two-year high of 7632.7 points, Australia's ASX 200 index dived 104.56 points or 1.4 per cent to close at a five-day low of 7523.2.

It follows a 0.6 per cent fall in the S&P 500 on the New York Stock Exchange overnight on Tuesday amid sharp falls in the "Magnificent Seven" tech giants including Apple, Meta Platforms and NVIDIA.

In percentage terms it was the biggest one-day fall in the ASX 200 since 27 September.

On Tuesday the ASX 200 rose 0.5 per cent to 7627.8 points, just below its record closing high of 7628.9 reached in August 2021. The local market had soared almost 13 per cent in about nine weeks from October 30 to January 2, tracking a rise in the US market. All sectors of the Australian market fell on Wednesday. BHP closed down 1.5 per cent to $49.77 while CBA was off 1.3 per cent to $112.13 and CSL dipped 1.2 per cent to $284.81.

Geminder closes in on Pact threshold

Eli Greenblat

Billionaire Raphael Geminder is within striking distance of wrapping up his $289m takeover for packaging company Pact, but a Christmas sharemarket rally has pushed the share price above his offer.

Mr Geminder's off-market takeover sits just short of the 90 per cent ownership he needs to acquire the remaining shares.

However, the recent sharemarket rally and thin trading volumes over the Christmas and New Year holiday have helped lift the Pact share price to 86.5c on Wednesday, higher than the 84c price per share offered by Mr Geminder's private company, Bennamon Industries.

Mr Geminder launched his takeover bid for Pact in September, offering just 68c per share and at the time he was sitting on just over 50 per cent of the company.

Later, Pact's independent directors recommended shareholders reject the first bid after an independent expert argued the company was worth between 83c and $1.24 a share. Mr Geminder later upped his bid to 84c.

The Pact float was the largest IPO in the Australian market in 2013 and at their peak, the shares were trading at around $7, to value the company at $2.4bn.

In its fifth supplementary bidder's statement and variation of takeover bid documents lodged with the ASX on Wednesday, Bennamon offered faster payment terms and reported it was now sitting at 85 per cent ownership. It said once it gets to 90 per cent it will move to compulsorily acquire all shares.

Mr Geminder is also considering delisting Pact even if he falls short of the 90 per cent barrier, although this would require ASX and shareholder approval.

Community is crucial for life

Maha Sinnathamby

The availability and affordability of housing in Queensland, and related cost-of-living pressures, continue to be major topics of discussion.

There are clear short-term options to help address these issues but longer-term planning can provide more certainty. The learnings from three decades of Springfield city can assist policymakers trying to unpick these housing and affordability pressures.

Springfield city was created from almost 3000 hectares of land that sat, largely unused, on Brisbane's doorstep.

We wanted to build a city from scratch and to make it Australia's first master-planned community since Canberra became the national capital.

That was a longer road to success than the quick turnover of land but that provided the infrastructure, design and community that ensured residents could live, work and play in Springfield and not add to the pressures on Brisbane's CBD.

That's an important element in enabling Queensland to accommodate a growing population. This can't just be about building apartments on spare land close to the CBD. There must be more to the solution.

A collective focus on enhancing human and social capital will bring the best results. The best outcomes for a nation's productivity occur in the most liveable communities.

That is an underrated element in driving economic growth. Liveable and vibrant cities promote community cohesion and create stronger economies.

Springfield city can be part of this solution along with other Queensland areas that have the scope, energy and policy support to develop communities, not just houses.

Springfield city is home to more than 55,000 residents, 12 schools, 25 childcare centres and a university campus.

This education focus is vital to developing any community – education is the currency of the future.

Our young Queenslanders can cash in that currency and it can't be stolen from them. Soon, Mater Private Hospital Springfield will expand to include 174 public beds, maternity services, an intensive care unit and an emergency department.

Artist's impression of Mater Springfield expansion.

The maternity services will ensure the needs of Springfield families continue to be addressed with the city among the top five postcodes for births in Queensland last year.

Our Knowledge Precinct includes BioPark Australia which is already attracting multiple biologic industry firms that will provide health innovations to benefit the lives of Australians and beyond.

We remain ready to embrace new technologies as our world changes and we have the agility to help bring these developments to life without the same challenges that may face other regions.

Brighton Homes Arena brings national sport to the region, right next to a train station that opens our city to others. A championship golf course is a short drive away.

All of these services require employees. And those employees can live near their work. These services are crucial to developing a community that knows it can live, work and relax in close proximity without adding to the extra services in nearby cities. Nation-building demands vision.

It demands placing people at its forefront and not money.

It demands insight, collaboration and goodwill from governments and from the private sector.

And it demands the bold pursuit of long-term solutions that will serve generations.

CHAMPAGNE DELIGHT 1, Terror Eyes 2, Settebello 3, Flying Sparks 4

OVERVIEW: CHAMPAGNE DELIGHT (13) hasn't raced since November 2022 but she remains undefeated from two starts and recorded a mile rate of 1.54.3 at her latest success so she cannot be underestimated. TERROR EYES (8) has improved with each start since coming from New Zealand and broke through for a deserved victory at Geelong last time out defeating the subsequent Albury winner Cresco Threepeat. He is awkwardly drawn but has too much ability to dismiss. SETTEBELLO (7) has had three starts back from a longspell and should be reaching his peak form. This race is a little easier than his latest sixth and he is worth thought a ticket each way. FLYING SPARKS (12) was heavily supported and was successful after trailing the leader throughout and using the sprint lane at Geelong last outing. He is not as well drawn for this assignment but he is worth thought again.

SPACEWRITER 1, Iamawingate 2, Tophut Johny 3, El Awoman 4

OVERVIEW: SPACEWRITER (9) is a grinding type, which was able to get up and win under similar conditions at Ballarat last outing so he should prove hard to beat again. IAMAWINGATE (4) has won two of his past four starts and is a brilliant beginner so he should give a forward showing. He commenced from the second row and tried to sustain a long run from the back at his latest ninth. TOPHUT JOHNY (7) is a versatile pacer and has been placed at his past seven starts. He progressed forward from a similar wide draw to race without cover when a strong winner at Maryborough last outing. EL AWOMAN (3) was held up for a run at a vital stage and finished off quickly for a close third behind Thelongroadnowhere at Stawell last outing. She has had several chances since her latest win back in April but she is getting closer to the money.

KYVALLEYHONEYBUNNY 1, Jazspur 2, Madena Sky 3, Win Flynn 4

OVERVIEW: KYVALLEYHONEYBUNNY (7) has a tough draw to overcome but she is racing in fine form and is the class runner of the field. She was forced to race without cover throughout when a brave second at Melton on Sunday night and is capable of going one better here. JAZSPUR (8) began quickly and attempted to lead throughout in a very strong race at Melton last outing. This is a drop back in class and she was a winner at Ballarat on December 07 so she is worth another chance. MADENASKY (6) does most of her racing from the standing start but she is very consistent having been placed in eight of her past nine starts. She worked forward from the handicap of 10m to find the lead and battled on well for third behind Speedy Lover at her latest attempt. WIN FLYNN (4) has a lot of ability when she is able to put it altogether and has winning claims from her good draw.

OVERVIEW: OUR STORM GIRL (1) is a debutante for trainer Emma Stewart, which finished fourth behind the classy filly Soho Honey Rider (won since) in her qualifying trial several months ago. She strikes a suitable assignment first up and is likely to attract plenty of support. COOPER CLEAVER (2) settled three back on the inside and tried hard when second behind Followtheace at Maryborough last outing. He is drawn to receive every chance so he should run a good race again. BLUE MIKI (6) made several errors on his debut and lost his winning chance but his trial form prior was very strong including a victory in a mile rate of 2.12 at Maryborough on December 03 so a forward showing would not surprise. BONDINE (3) finished a distant second at a recent Horsham trial effort and the other debutante CARRAMAR BULLOCK (5) finished fourth in the Maryborough trial won by BLUE MIKI (6) on December 03.

APRIL IN PARIS (3) resumes from a spell after placing in the last three of her attempts at breaking maiden ranks last season. Beaten as a red figure fav last start over this trip when trying to take them all the way, she struck some handy one's last campaign and can return in style here. SCORES (9) was building towards the first win of his career and was able to achieve it last start over the AP mile when sent forward from a wide gate. Confidence is a plus; the gate is a minus. SINGER SNAP (7) has had 64 previous attempts and opening the account that have come up short. A soft trip here gives him a chance to grab some minor money.

SHOOBEE RIGHT (8) was a consistent performer throughout 2023 with nine minors in 17 attempts before claiming the first outright victory of his career here last start. Sweeping down the outside to score in that event, he can look to build and start the year where he left off. SALS LAST BLAST (2) started from gate 1 here two starts back and was soon shuffled back in the run when grabbing the bronze behind MY ULTIMATE BUDDHA. Runner-up last start from gate 5 when sent out fav, he can get handy to issue the challenge. FINANCIAL BURDEN (6) broke maiden ranks with a tough effort over the AP mile two starts back when rolling forward from a wide gate. Tackling stronger company last start, he can feature here. SWEET RIPPIN (3) has started from outside the front line at her past two starts owing to the ODM embargo and moving back into the draw can return a much sharper performance.

ROCCO VARIETY (6) was a Marburg winner four starts back when firing out to take control from gate 2 and was never bothered thereafter. Not too far away in all three since, he chased from deep field over the AP mile last start with a checkered passage. He can defy the gate in this grade. SONNY ORLANDO (3) released last start over the 2040 trip after initially finding the front before a midfield finish behind TORQUE IN CONTROL. He finds the right set up here to press forward early and from near the front end will get his chance to issue a challenge. IM A CLASSY GIRL (9) was making good metres here two starts back when 5m from the winner and last start grabbed 3rd behind a big winner in PYRRHIC DANCER. She can be chiming in here. JUST ONE GOOD ONE (7) was a Marburg runner-up two starts back when working home wide off the track behind ROCCO VARIETY. From a tricky gate he can be probing for openings.

MAJOR MONDO (4) started from inside the second line last start over the AP 2138 and was soon three back the inside. Making a late raid to grab the silver behind RISE ABOVE ALL, he is 1 from 2 on this deck and with a few of his opponents susceptible at the trip, can look to capitalise. THE CASUAL GOOSE (1) was a winner here four starts back when settling in the running line from a second line gate and powering home over the top to a narrow victory. Buried at each of his past two from an inside second line gate, back to the front line can see him challenge. SHAKALAKABOOMBOOM (3) has good arm hustle and from this alley can look to fire some early bullets. A winner from the front four runs back, she is a proven winner at the trip and can feature. TRACER BULLET (7) was a winner two starts back when pulling clear over the closing stages for a big 11m margin. OFFICE BAD BOY (8) sat in the pocket trail last three runs back when starting from the ace when finishing 3m from the winner SHAKALAKABOOMBOOM. Following that with another bronze after being sent forward to sit parked, he finds a wide-open contest here and looks up to the task. DUKE (9) has no favours from the outside second line, but this race could go any number of ways. Buried in the run last start and unable to find the space to make a meaningful challenge, he can look for the right cart into the contest here to stake a claim. BUSTN FEELZ GOOD (5) has won two of his past five starts, the latest of those at Marburg three runs back when leading throughout. The wide gate dents his chances of chalking up another win here. LETS SAVE THE DAY (7) was midfield last start when buried form this same gate. OUR UNCLE LES 1, Tactfilly Miracle 2, Altana Blue 3, Illbewatching 4

OUR UNCLE LES (1) forced the issue last start when pressing on from gate 4 to eventually take over but after working early was unable to see it out and faded. Overcoming the outside second line to score two starts back, he can take control early and pinching a panel or two, look to see it out. TACTFILLY MIRACLE (5) was able to weave a passage last start from a tricky position to arrive with a 3m margin. Building towards that win with some handy performances in recent appearances, she is given no favour from the wide gate at a distance that she has struggled to convert to victory. ALTANA BLUE (7) will be on the two-day back up but should enjoy the economical trip from this gate. If he can spot the openings with momentum and track, he can be in the mix. ILLBEWATCHING (6) has placed in three of his past five starts, the latest when chasing for the bronze behind THERESACHANCE. Strong to the line from outside the second line two back, he has claims.

DELIGHTFUL RAINBOW (3) tackled a mare's qualifier last start when spearing across to take control in the early stages. Trying to fend them off, she was collared in the last strides to finish just a head away from a perfect end to the year. With the right trip, she can look to go one better. BLISSFULDAY (1) faced this same gate two starts back and taking the trail at the 2040 trip was 6m astern of the winner THERESACHANCE. Midfield over the AP mile last start behind a dictating SHEZA CRACKER, he lands all the options here to issue a challenge. HEY MISTER TAYLOR (7) hit the board in 50% of his appearances last term but struggled to convert his consistency into winning form. With the soft trip, he can look to chalk up another minor first up in the new season. THE WATERBOY (5) was sent forward from this same gate last start and asked to sit parked was not that far from the winner ASHLEE NITRO when 8m astern. MISTER QUIRK (6) was first up in Qld last start when releasing over the AP mile in a strong contest but unable to go on with it as ARKIN WICKED took the prize. With some handy Penrith form prior to that, he resumes off a freshen and despite the wide gate can look to capitalise. OYSTER STRIDE (2) could not get across last start from this gate and left exposed early, was able to secure running line cover, ultimately finishing just out of the money. A runner-up here three back when working home from deep field, he can look to take control and from the front give cheek. FIRE AND ICE (4) was taken back last start from gate 4 and from back in the pack could not really get warm over the closing stages. First up from a spell two back, he can be sharper here. TAKE A CHANCE (8) is given no favours from a second line gate as he tackles some experienced performers first up for his 3YO term. Last seen back in August, he has trialled nicely and stays under notice.

Driving force

MILLE
MIGLIA

Adam Driver as Enzo Ferrari in filmmaker Michael Mann's movie Ferrari.

If the life of legendary Italian car impresario Enzo Ferrari was a motor race, then the engrossing new movie which bears his (brand)name takes in only one lap of the circuit.

It is certainly not a victory lap. And it is by no means the fastest lap.

However, it is the most crucial lap completed during the Ferrari life story: the distance of which will take in the calendar year of 1957.

If Enzo Ferrari (played with fastidious poise and restraint by an impressive Adam Driver) does not end that year as the head of a viable car manufacturing company, then everything he has worked for will be pulled off the road and stripped for parts.

With his business teetering on the edge of ruin – too few cars are being sold to the public, and too few races are being won on the track – Ferrari takes out an audacious, make-or-break bet. His immediate livelihood and ongoing legacy will all come down to the performance of his team in one event of the 1957 season: a notoriously dangerous, all-day road race across Italy known as the Mille Miglia.

Ferrari's best drivers and fastest cars are assembled and unleashed upon the unpredictably twisting, turning and undulating roads of rural Italia. It is virtually guaranteed that not all men or machines gathered at the start of the Mille Miglia will be there at the finish.

This was an era where the death of a driver in the pursuit of championship glory was deemed acceptable collateral damage by both team owners and the general public alike.

As for the cars, these open-topped chariots offered little in the way of protection for those steering them. Seat belts were not an option. (At the time, it was believed a driver stood more chance of surviving a wreck if he was thrown clear of the wreckage.)

As for the brakes, gears, tyres or structural soundness, let's just say each component could come, go and return at a moment's notice.

Whether the action is taking place on a test circuit, a racetrack or the open road, any sequence in which a four-wheeled Ferrari creation is barrelling along at high speed is an incredibly exciting, imposing and rather stressful experience.

To provide some necessary contrast – and for that matter, relief – Ferrari the movie studiously fills in some of the blanks of Ferrari the man.

Enzo's long-neglected wife Laura (a stunning Penelope Cruz) couldn't care less about her spouse's exalted status as "the second most famous man in Italy to the Pope". She is too busy keeping their business afloat, keeping their household going, and keeping the memory of their recently deceased son alive for another day.

Shortly after we first meet Laura, she pulls a gun on her husband for a relatively minor misdemeanour. Just wait until she finds out about the mistress (Shailene Woodley) and young child that Enzo has been hiding away for well over a decade.

This polished and captivating portrait of Enzo Ferrari and his sleek red racing works of motorised art is sure to be studied and replayed several times over by devout petrolheads.

While some may feel that acclaimed filmmaker Michael Mann lets a little too much of Enzo's domestic downtime into frame, these slower moments in a lesser gear make the racing scenes whoosh by with even more power under the hood.

FORD V FERRARI

All roads lead towards the 1966 edition of the Le Mans 24-hour motor race, where American giant Ford is looking to end the dominance of its Italian rival, Ferrari. It is here we find a well-matched Matt Damon (as gifted designer Carroll Shelby) and Christian Bale (as maverick driving ace Ken Miles) in fast, furious form. A movie that keeps putting the foot down, even when it backs off the velocity.

An exciting time capsule of old-school F1 racing, focusing on the 1976 Drivers Championship. Two daredevils clear out from the pack. Their rivalry? Beyond intense. Their individual personalities? Beyond opposite. British maverick James Hunt (Chris Hemsworth) drives fast, and lives even faster. Austrian ace Niki Lauda (Daniel Bruhl) plays the percentages, and lives only to drive.

NEED FOR SPEED

Aaron Paul (Breaking Bad) plays an ex-con street racer looking for redemption in a cross-country crash-a-thon organised by a mystery man zillionaire (Michael Keaton). OK, so the script backfires. What about the stunts? Well, they more than deliver. All the fiery wrecks, sudden swerves and unplanned off-road departures were achieved without the aid of CGI. Co-stars Dominic Cooper.

THE BOYS IN THE BOAT (PG)

From left, Chris Diamantopoulos as Royal Brougham, James Wolk as Coach Tom Bolles, and Joel Edgerton as Al Ulbrickson in director George Clooney's The Boys in the Boat.

This proudly old-fashioned true story of a longshot lunge at Olympic gold might seem undeniably corny to the naked eye. However, this remarkable tale will prove irresistibly compelling to anyone whose spiritual sporting calling is to always side with the underdog.

Under the straightforward direction of George Clooney (who remains strictly behind the camera here), we learn how Team USA took out one of rowing's most revered events at the 1936 Olympics in Berlin. Not with the usual crew of privileged oarsmen from elite colleges who had trained their entire lives to reach the pinnacle of their sport.

Nope, America's Men's Eight crew was comprised of a bunch of rookies, who just a year before comprised a lowly reserve crew at the University of Washington. Somehow, these green kids rocketed through the ranks of rowing to challenge and beat the world's best. It is a singular achievement that is as awesome as it is baffling.

To use a cricketing analogy, the victory chronicled here is the equivalent of a suburban second eleven representing Australia at a World Cup and winning the whole darn thing. With so many characters involved in and out of the boat, worthwhile development of most figures is near impossible. Only Joel Edgerton's nuggety head coach and Callum Turner's poor-boy raw recruit register with any real impact.

However, the open-water racing is surprisingly exciting throughout, allowing Clooney the licence to let this stirring tale of perspiration, deprivation and inspiration pretty much tell itself.

Fabulous fruit

Make the most of summer mangoes with these recipes

MACADAMIA, MANGO & COCONUT TART

SERVES 10. PREP 1 HOUR 30 MINS. COOK 15 MINS

Ingredients

- 145g (1 cup) roasted salted macadamias
- 50g (½ cup) rolled oats
- 30g (½ cup) moist coconut flakes
- 1 tbsp coconut sugar
- 75g butter, melted
- 2 mangoes, peeled, thinly sliced
- 2 passionfruit, halved
- Toasted flaked coconut, to serve

Tart filling

- 170g carton vanilla quark-style yoghurt
- 250g light cream cheese, at room temperature
- 1 ½ tbsp fresh lemon juice
- 1 tsp gelatine powder
- 1 tbsp maple syrup
- 2 tsp vanilla bean paste

Method

1 Preheat the oven to 180C/160C fan-forced. Grease a 22cm fluted tart tin with removable base with olive oil spray. Place macadamias, oats, coconut and sugar in a food processor. Process until finely chopped. Add the butter and process until the mixture just comes together. Wipe the bowl of the food processor clean.

2 Press the mixture firmly into the base and side of the prepared tin. Place in the fridge for 10 minutes. Place the tin on a baking tray. Bake for 10-15 minutes or until the base is lightly golden. Use the back of a spoon to flatten the base and side of the pastry case evenly. Set aside to cool.

3 For the filling, process the quark and cream cheese until smooth. Pour the lemon juice into a small heatproof bowl. Sprinkle gelatine over the lemon juice. Place the bowl inside a larger heatproof bowl. Pour boiling water into the larger bowl until it reaches halfway up the side of the smaller bowl. Use a fork to stir to dissolve gelatine. Add to the cream cheese mixture and process until smooth. Add the maple syrup and vanilla. Process to combine. Pour into the cooled tart base and smooth the surface. Place in the fridge for 1-2 hours or until just set.

4 Remove the tart from the tin. Curl mango slices and place on top of the tart. Drizzle over the passionfruit pulp and scatter with the toasted coconut.

SLOW COOKER MANGO CHICKEN

SERVES 4. PREP 15 MINS. COOK 4 HOURS

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp yellow curry paste
- 1 tsp ground turmeric
- 6 RSPCA approved chicken thigh fillets, trimmed, halved crossways
- 500g pkt frozen mango cheeks, partially thawed, coarsely chopped (see note)
- 2 red capsicum, deseeded, thickly sliced
- 1 large red onion, cut into wedges
- 1 tbsp finely grated fresh ginger
- 3 garlic cloves, crushed
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 200ml UHT coconut cream (see note)
- 1 tbsp brown sugar
- 2 green onions, thinly sliced
- ⅓ cup fresh coriander leaves
- 1 fresh long red chilli, thinly sliced
- Lime wedges, to serve
- Steamed rice, to serve

Method

1 Combine the curry paste and turmeric in a large bowl. Add the chicken, season and toss well to combine. Set aside.

2 Place half the mango in a food processor and process until smooth. Transfer to the bowl of a slow cooker. Stir in 80ml (⅓ cup) water. Top with capsicum, onion, ginger and garlic.

3 Heat oil in a large frying pan over medium-high heat. Add chicken and cook, turning, for 5 minutes or until golden brown. Add to the slow cooker bowl. Cover and cook on Low for 3 hours or until the chicken is starting to become tender.

4 Add coconut cream to the slow cooker. Cover and cook on High for 1 hour or until the sauce thickens slightly. Stir in the remaining mango along with the sugar. Cook for a further 10 minutes or until the mango has warmed through. Turn off slow cooker and set aside for 5 minutes to rest.

5 Divide rice among serving plates. Add chicken and sprinkle with green onions, coriander and chilli. Serve with lime wedges.

NOTES

- When mango is in season, substitute 500g of fresh mango pieces for this recipe.
- UHT coconut cream has been heat-treated and although rich and creamy it doesn't curdle in the slow cooker. Swap for a 270ml can coconut cream if unavailable.

Cash hangover

How to recover from your holiday splurges

Financial content creator Queenie Tan breaks her financial goals down to 90-day blocks; below, money coach and author Max Phelps.

In addition to the festive hangover, there's an aftermath many of us grapple with at this time of year: the financial repercussions of Christmas spending. Recovering from the holiday splurge doesn't have to be daunting with these tips to manage debt and set a course for a financially resilient 2024.

UNDERSTAND THE STRAIN

Money coach and author Max Phelps says while holiday overspending is normal, it's the lack of planning that makes the impact harder for many people.

"It's common to spend an average $2400 extra at Christmas, but most people don't set aside the $200 a month needed to be ready for it," says Phelps.

BUILD A SOLID FOUNDATION

Phelps – author of Spending, Fast and Slow: Why Your Money Disappears so Fast and How to Slow Down the Flow – suggests adopting the Fast & Slow System for better financial management.

He recommends dividing your funds between two banks, dedicating one for bills and savings, while the other is used for variable spending.

"The idea is to have your pay land in Bank A, used only to pay bills and then transfer into your spending bank, Bank B," he says. "Ignore the pay cycle and do the transfers to Bank B weekly for groceries and small routine spending items, plus a monthly transfer for gifts, clothes, electronics and fun stuff.

"Then open up separate savings accounts labelled Future, Holidays, and another for Christmas with your Bank A, or any other high-interest bank accounts not with Bank B, and put money in those every pay to be ready for next year."

He also suggests curbing routine purchases under $30 to save for fun activities and long-term goals.

TACKLE DEBT AND BUDGET SMART

Phelps recommends the snowball method for debt: paying off the smallest debt and working your way up.

He says this provides a sense of accomplishment with each debt cleared, motivating progress.

He advises controlling impulsive spending by limiting access to funds outside of your weekly and monthly budgets.

"That means no card access to the accounts from Bank A," he says. "Any cards for those accounts should put on ice. This forces you to pause and think before dipping into the bills, or any savings." When it comes to bills, Phelps advises planning these expenses for the year by estimating the total and dividing it by 12, 26, or 52 based on pay cycles for better management.

CREATE EMERGENCY FUNDS

"Buffers are essential to peace of mind," says Phelps, starting with a $500 buffer which is hard to access, gradually increasing it to cover three months of living expenses. "Emergencies shouldn't be predictable things like holidays and car repairs, these should be planned in as normal expenses, based on an estimate."

FINDING SPENDING HABITS THAT WORK

Tan says it's important to find something that works for you over the long term.

"The strategy we use is the 'pay yourself first' budget, which means no matter what, every month we contribute $1000 to our investments before we start allocating our expenses," says Tan, who regularly shares financial tips on social media at @investwithqueenie.

"Other budgeting strategies work for different people, like the 50/30/20 budget – which is 50 per cent of your income to needs, 30 per cent to wants, and 20 per cent to savings and investments.

"Pablo and I realised we were spending heaps more on food than we usually do – up by an extra $500 per month.

"Once we knew this, we were able to be more mindful of our spending and now we spend around $500 less on food each month and the quality hasn't decreased. We've just been more mindful."

LOOKING AHEAD

Tan says she finds breaking her financial goals down to 90 days helps.

"I prefer to set 90-day goals," she says.

"I find it's a good amount of time to achieve pretty big goals, and it's not too long before you completely forget about your goals.

"If you set goals every 90 days, you can achieve four times as many goals in a year than if you just set goals at the beginning of the year. Break down your goal into smaller pieces. If you want to save $10,000 in one year, that's $27.40 per day, which is a lot more manageable."

Today, as Mars (the power planet) moves into earthy Capricorn, it gears up to create a "talent triangle". This formation involves Mars and Jupiter working in harmony encouraged by the cosmic teacher, Saturn. Together, they paint a picture of a growing confidence in our ability to turn imaginative ideas into tangible, measurable progress. Yet for this to come to pass, we can't simply sit back and hope for the best. The more enthusiasm we apply to our work the better. And the faster the results of our efforts will be seen.

ARIES MAR 21 - APR 20

There's no point in me telling you that "today is the first day of the rest of your life". You're very familiar with the expression. You know that even though it might feel very similar to yesterday (and tomorrow), it's not. Which emphasises the value of today's forecast. The New Year is underway and your ruler, Mars, is playing an important role in the exciting cosmic outlook. You have the freedom to transform what you want in your world. Why not choose today to be the day to start turning your life into what you want it to be? Let your forecasts for 2024 guide you to success. Visit ozfree.cainer.com

TAURUS APR 21–MAY 21

Why do we think being stubborn is "wrong"? I think it's a quality that needs to be appreciated. So many people give up at the first obstacle. And change their minds at the drop of a hat. Thank goodness for Taureans. You're not afraid to stand up for your beliefs, even in the face of criticism. Right now though, it's worth questioning your conviction. Could this be a situation where a compromise would be more effective? A small concession could have positive effects today. (And if necessary, you can always go back to your original stance). 2024 will be much better than you think. For insight, visit ozfree.cainer.com

GEMINI MAY 22–JUN 22

Questions always pop up at the start of a new year. What should you be doing with your life? What do you need to feel fulfilled and happy? These kinds of ponderings are tricky; they can throw us into a quagmire of self-doubt. Which is never a good place to be. Does anyone feel successful all the time? I doubt it. The best strategy to follow is to be confident that whatever you're doing right now, and wherever you're doing it, it's the right thing to be doing. With this attitude any doubts will disappear. And you'll be on the path to progress. Gain power over your future. 2024 brings transformation. Visit ozfree.cainer.com

CANCER JUN 23–JUL 23

You don't usually struggle to articulate your ideas. So, to find yourself unable to say what's on your heart is making you uncomfortable. You're worried that if you speak out, you'll cause an upset. And you're probably right. Yet your instincts are spot on; you're right to think that something needs to be discussed. Today, be as diplomatic as you can be (but don't be afraid to be bold). You've got the insight and skills to be able to talk about the "elephant in the room". Once it's out in the open, everyone will be relieved, and able to move on. Want to know why 2024 is so inspiring and positive? Visit ozfree.cainer.com

LEO JUL 24–AUG 23

Before you can set out on the high-seas adventure of 2024, you need to get some work done on your boat. For now, you're moored in a safe harbour and getting on with some rather dull jobs. It's easy to think of other things to do (that would be much more fun). But the tasks you need to complete aren't as tedious as you think. Nor are they going to take long to complete. If you look out towards the horizon, you'll get a feel for the opportunities waiting for you. The preparations you're doing now will enable you to sail out, and seize them. For valuable news about your prospects in 2024, visit ozfree.cainer.com

VIRGO AUG 24–SEP 23

It's all a matter of perspective. Depending on how we feel, and what we want to see, we view the situations we're dealing with very differently. When we're optimistic, we can find silver linings even in difficult scenarios. But when we're not, it's as if we're wearing dark shades, which give everything a gloomy look. Today, as dynamic Mars enters earthy Capricorn, it brings the energy to fan a glimmer of hope into a realistic aspiration. With just a simple change of attitude you can take steps to make your future much brighter. For great news about the possibilities that await in 2024 visit ozfree.cainer.com

LIBRA SEP 24–OCT 23

It's astonishing how we all sometimes find ourselves doing the exact opposite of what we know we "should" do. We step on the brake (rather than the accelerator). Or we say "no" to something we ought to say "yes" to. It's easy, with hindsight, to see that we'd have been better off following a different course. Yet looking back with regret is never helpful. If you want to maximise the opportunities 2024 brings your way, you just need to forgive yourself and move on. With a clear conscience, you'll be unstoppable. Don't miss out. For insights, on your outlook for 2024, visit ozfree.cainer.com

SCORPIO OCT 24–NOV 22

How badly do you want what you want? Hmmm... maybe that's not the right word. Instead of how "badly" maybe we should use more positive terminology. How "deeply" maybe? What's important, is that you remember that you don't need to focus on one thing to the detriment of everything else. The start of 2024 is about aspiring to achieve your deepest desire. You need to be dedicated (even when the road ahead isn't smooth). But stay open-minded enough to be able to adapt your approach. Today, the cosmos helps you find the right balance. Let 2024 bring the changes you desire. Visit ozfree.cainer.com

SAGITTARIUS NOV 23–DEC 21

The start of 2024 is a bit like one of those complicated jigsaws. You don't seem to have an image of what it will look like once it's complete. Aargh. In fact, you're not even sure you've got all the pieces. You're managing to fit some parts together, but they won't join up into a cohesive picture. It's frustrating. Yet with power planet Mars moving into earthy Capricorn, you'll find it easier to direct your focus and concentrate. If you stay motivated, you'll soon find a way to put everything together in a way that makes perfect sense. 2024 brings optimism and hope. Don't miss your 2024 forecasts. Visit ozfree.cainer.com

CAPRICORN DEC 22–JAN 20

With dynamic Mars entering your sign today, as your journey into 2024 progresses you'll feel more and more aware that the sky has your best interests at heart. The cosmic support you're receiving will be reflected by the opportunities coming your way. If you're not yet feeling galvanised into action, you don't have long to wait. Meanwhile, try focusing on the potential available to you today. Even if it doesn't feel like much, it hides a small treasure. And with the right attitude, you can encourage it to grow into something valuable. Make your dreams come true in 2024. Visit ozfree.cainer.com

AQUARIUS JAN 21–FEB 19

There's no denying the fact that you're moving into the future. 2024 has arrived and ahead of you lies a blank canvas of possibilities. I hope you're ready. Because there's no going back. If you're regretting a recent choice, which left you feeling uncomfortable, as you move deeper into the new year you'll grow more at ease with it. Deep down, you're growing more confident that you're on the right track. Today, as Mars moves into your neighbouring sign, even taking tentative steps forwards will take you further than you think. For brilliant news about your prospects in 2024, visit ozfree.cainer.com

PISCES FEB 20–MAR 20

We talk about there being "no time like the present". But it's not always easy to pinpoint when "the present" actually is. It was certainly a very different "present" when this saying originated over 450 years ago. So, maybe you're better off going along with whatever 2024 brings your way for now, and trust/hope that you'll recognise the time to instigate change when it appears? On second thoughts... don't do that. If you're meant to wait, the cosmos will create distractions. But if there are none of those around today, seize the moment. There's hope on your horizon in 2024. Kings' part-time Glover

Angus Glover was the unsung hero who defied a rib cartilage injury and struggles to breathe to guide the Sydney Kings to back-to-back championships.

Flash forward to this season and Glover's role has been reduced in a star-studded Kings roster – and it hasn't gone unnoticed.

The underrated guard's minutes have dropped in NBL24 to 14.2 minutes a game, compared to 16.6 and 19.4 minutes in the past two title-winning seasons.

Glover was the catalyst for the Kings' first quarter turnaround. He came off the bench with four minutes left in the first and dropped six points to help Sydney haul in a six-point deficit to regain the lead.

Glover also started the fourth quarter, but was subbed out of the game with six minutes remaining.

He finished the game with six points in his 10 minutes on the floor.

Respected voices have described Glover's slide in minutes this season as "bewildering", given the guard possess the "grit" and "edge" the Kings have lacked at both ends of the floor.

"Angus came in, hit a couple of shots and looked good and then he didn't get back on the court," Gaze said.

"He then started the fourth, but only for a few minutes.

"He (Kings coach Mahmoud Abdelfattah) has got some talent on that team that he has to find minutes for and it's hard because there are a lot of guys who are similar."

Sydney haven't been as consistent as past seasons, especially on the defensive end, but Gaze believes the men in purple and gold still possess the talent to contend for a rare three-peat.

The third-placed Kings face an enormous challenge against the league-leading Melbourne United at Qudos Bank Arena today.

The Kings led by 15 points at halftime before Melbourne charged home on the back of a 40-21 final-quarter surge.

Sydney will go in as underdogs against title favourite United, but Gaze isn't ruling out the back-to-back champions just yet.

"Put a line through them at your peril, I say," he said.

"I think they've still got enough if they're able to get it going. They've still got time and they're right there on the ladder, so they are still in contention and can cause some problems. You only have to look at what Perth were doing to start the season.

"The Wildcats' defence was pretty bad and eventually they found the right formula and it has been a complete turnaround for them."

WILD KYLE BACK FROM WILD WEST

Veteran guard Kyle Adnam is back in Australia after an eye-opening stint in the "Wild West" of Europe.

The 30-year-old former South East Melbourne captain's experience with Romanian club CSU Sibiu was a mix of incredible life and basketball experiences — soured by the all-too-familiar struggle faced by countless imports in the helter-skelter world of European basketball.

Adnam was in a constant battle just to get paid, regularly played in substandard facilities and confronted a professional culture that pales in comparison to what the NBL has set.

"The competition in the EuroCup was so elite and the crowds were insane," Adnam told Crosscourt.

"People were lighting flares, midgame, and it was so loud that there were times when you couldn't call a play as the point guard — some crazy experiences that I'll never forget in my entire life," Adnam told Crosscourt.

"But there's a darker side that's not all it's cracked up to be. I'd heard plenty of stories and now I have my own. It makes you appreciate how the NBL is presented and the industry standard that it has set but I'm still glad I challenged myself and have that experience in Europe as part of my journey."

And so, after 11 games across the regular season, Romania Cup and EuroCup where he averaged 10 points and 3 assists, the Victorian has parted ways with Sibiu and is back in Australia and looking for a job in the NBL.

The 2018 NBL champion is acutely aware an opportunity will only come as an injury replacement or in the less-likely event a club decides to make a roster change, but he's equally confident he can help drive a team's championship hopes.

"I understand it's difficult for teams to turn their whole season on its head, unless there's an injury," he said. "I'm pumped to hopefully be back in the NBL one day — it's just a matter of when and where."

Perth treading fine line between Henshall and pain

It's not a major concern at the moment but some in the Red Army do worry Henshall (pictured) could go the way of another beloved local in Luke Travers, one day, if he's not afforded the chance to test himself and develop in the heat of game situations.

Bryce Cotton basically plays a full game every night in one of the two available guard spots and, with Michael Harris seizing his chance and Rillie leaning on the experience of Tai Webster, the young WA local has seen the court just four times in the last 13 games — for eight-minutes-and-10 seconds.

Crosscourt has been told there was an early knock on the teen's ability to guard NBL-level talent but it's understood the basketball junkie has improved considerably on that end of the floor. It's hard not to get better when you're guarding three-time MVP Bryce Cotton every day, especially for a teenager who already has a prodigious work ethic.

"Ben's learning under some really experienced guards so when you're backing up Tai and Corey Webster, Bryce, this level of guard, for him, as a rookie, it's part of coming into the league," Perth's general manager of basketball operations Danny Mills said.

"One thing about Ben is he comes in every day, puts in extra work, comes in on off days, and he's consistently competing. He wants to get better so, for him, it's just about being patient."

It was announced, on Wednesday, Henshall would join the Otago Nuggets in the NZ NBL for its upcoming season.

36ERS URGED TO ASK GOORJ

Brian Goorjian once said he'd never coach the Adelaide 36ers, but 36ers legend Brett Maher hopes the GOAT of Australian basketball coaching will reconsider his stance.

The last-placed 36ers are on the lookout for a new coach after parting ways with CJ Bruton mid-season.

Adelaide officials have stated the club will search far and wide for a new coach, but Maher believes the best option could be Goorjian (pictured).

The NBL's most successful mentor told this column he will coach domestically after this year's Paris Olympics, which may open the door for a club like Adelaide.

"I'd love for the club to chat to Brian," said Maher, who won three NBL titles at Adelaide in 1998, 1999 and 2002.

"I really respect him and his abilities. He coached me at the 2004 Olympics and I played against him for a number of years.

"I remember when there was a huge rivalry and he said he'd never coach in Adelaide, but hopefully things have potentially changed since then."

Maher is close with 36ers interim coach Scott Ninnis, but he concedes his mate may need more wins to secure a shot at the role moving forward.

"I think Scotty would have to do well for the rest of the season to be considered, but he is still an option there as well."

Giddey lifts for Boston

Josh Giddey has delivered his best performance of what has been a difficult season in Oklahoma City Thunder's impressive win over Eastern Conference powerhouse Boston on Wednesday.

The 21-year-old drained four threes on his way to a season-high 23 points to go with eight rebounds and six assists.

It helped propel the Thunder to a 127-123 win over the Celtics in what lived up to the billing of a top-of-the-table clash. The Celtics sit first in the East while the Thunder is second in the Western Conference.

The Thunder looked set for a comfortable win after extending its lead out to 18 points in the fourth quarter only for the Celtics to mount a late comeback, capitalising on a series of turnovers from Oklahoma to move to within two points with a minute to go.

It continues a strong run of recent form for Giddey, who equalled a career-high four three-pointers in a 20-point display against the Brooklyn Nets on New Year's Day.

Roos can win Cup

Confidence high for success

Martin Gabor

It's been nine years since their famous Asian Cup win on home soil, and Socceroos star Craig Goodwin "genuinely believes" the Aussies can go all the way at this year's tournament in Qatar that begins next week.

The Socceroos are one of the favourites to win the event on the back of their strong World Cup showing in 2022, and they'll be out to make an early statement when they face Bahrain in a warm-up match on Sunday morning (Qld time).

It will be a great chance for some of the players to get used to the hot conditions in the Middle East – something South Australian Goodwin has grown accustomed to at his Saudi club Al-Wehda where he scored a goal and set another up last week.

The Socceroos are 25th in the FIFA rankings, with Japan, Iran and South Korea the only Asian nations ahead of them.

It's why there's a quiet optimism they can go all the way having reached the quarter-finals in 2019 when they were bundled out by the UAE.

"I genuinely believe we have the squad to win the Asian Cup," former Adelaide United star Goodwin said.

"It's going to be hard and difficult but we have a good group with a good mentality. We have the potential to do something special here."

Australia opens its campaign against India next Saturday before taking on Syria and Uzbekistan in Group B.

It's easy to get caught up in the emotion of the Socceroos returning to Qatar, where they got past the group stage and were eventually knocked out by Lionel Messi and Argentina who went on to win the World Cup, but Goodwin says it's a clean slate this time around.

"Qatar has been a happy place for myself and for us but it's about coming in with a different mindset and mentality," he said.

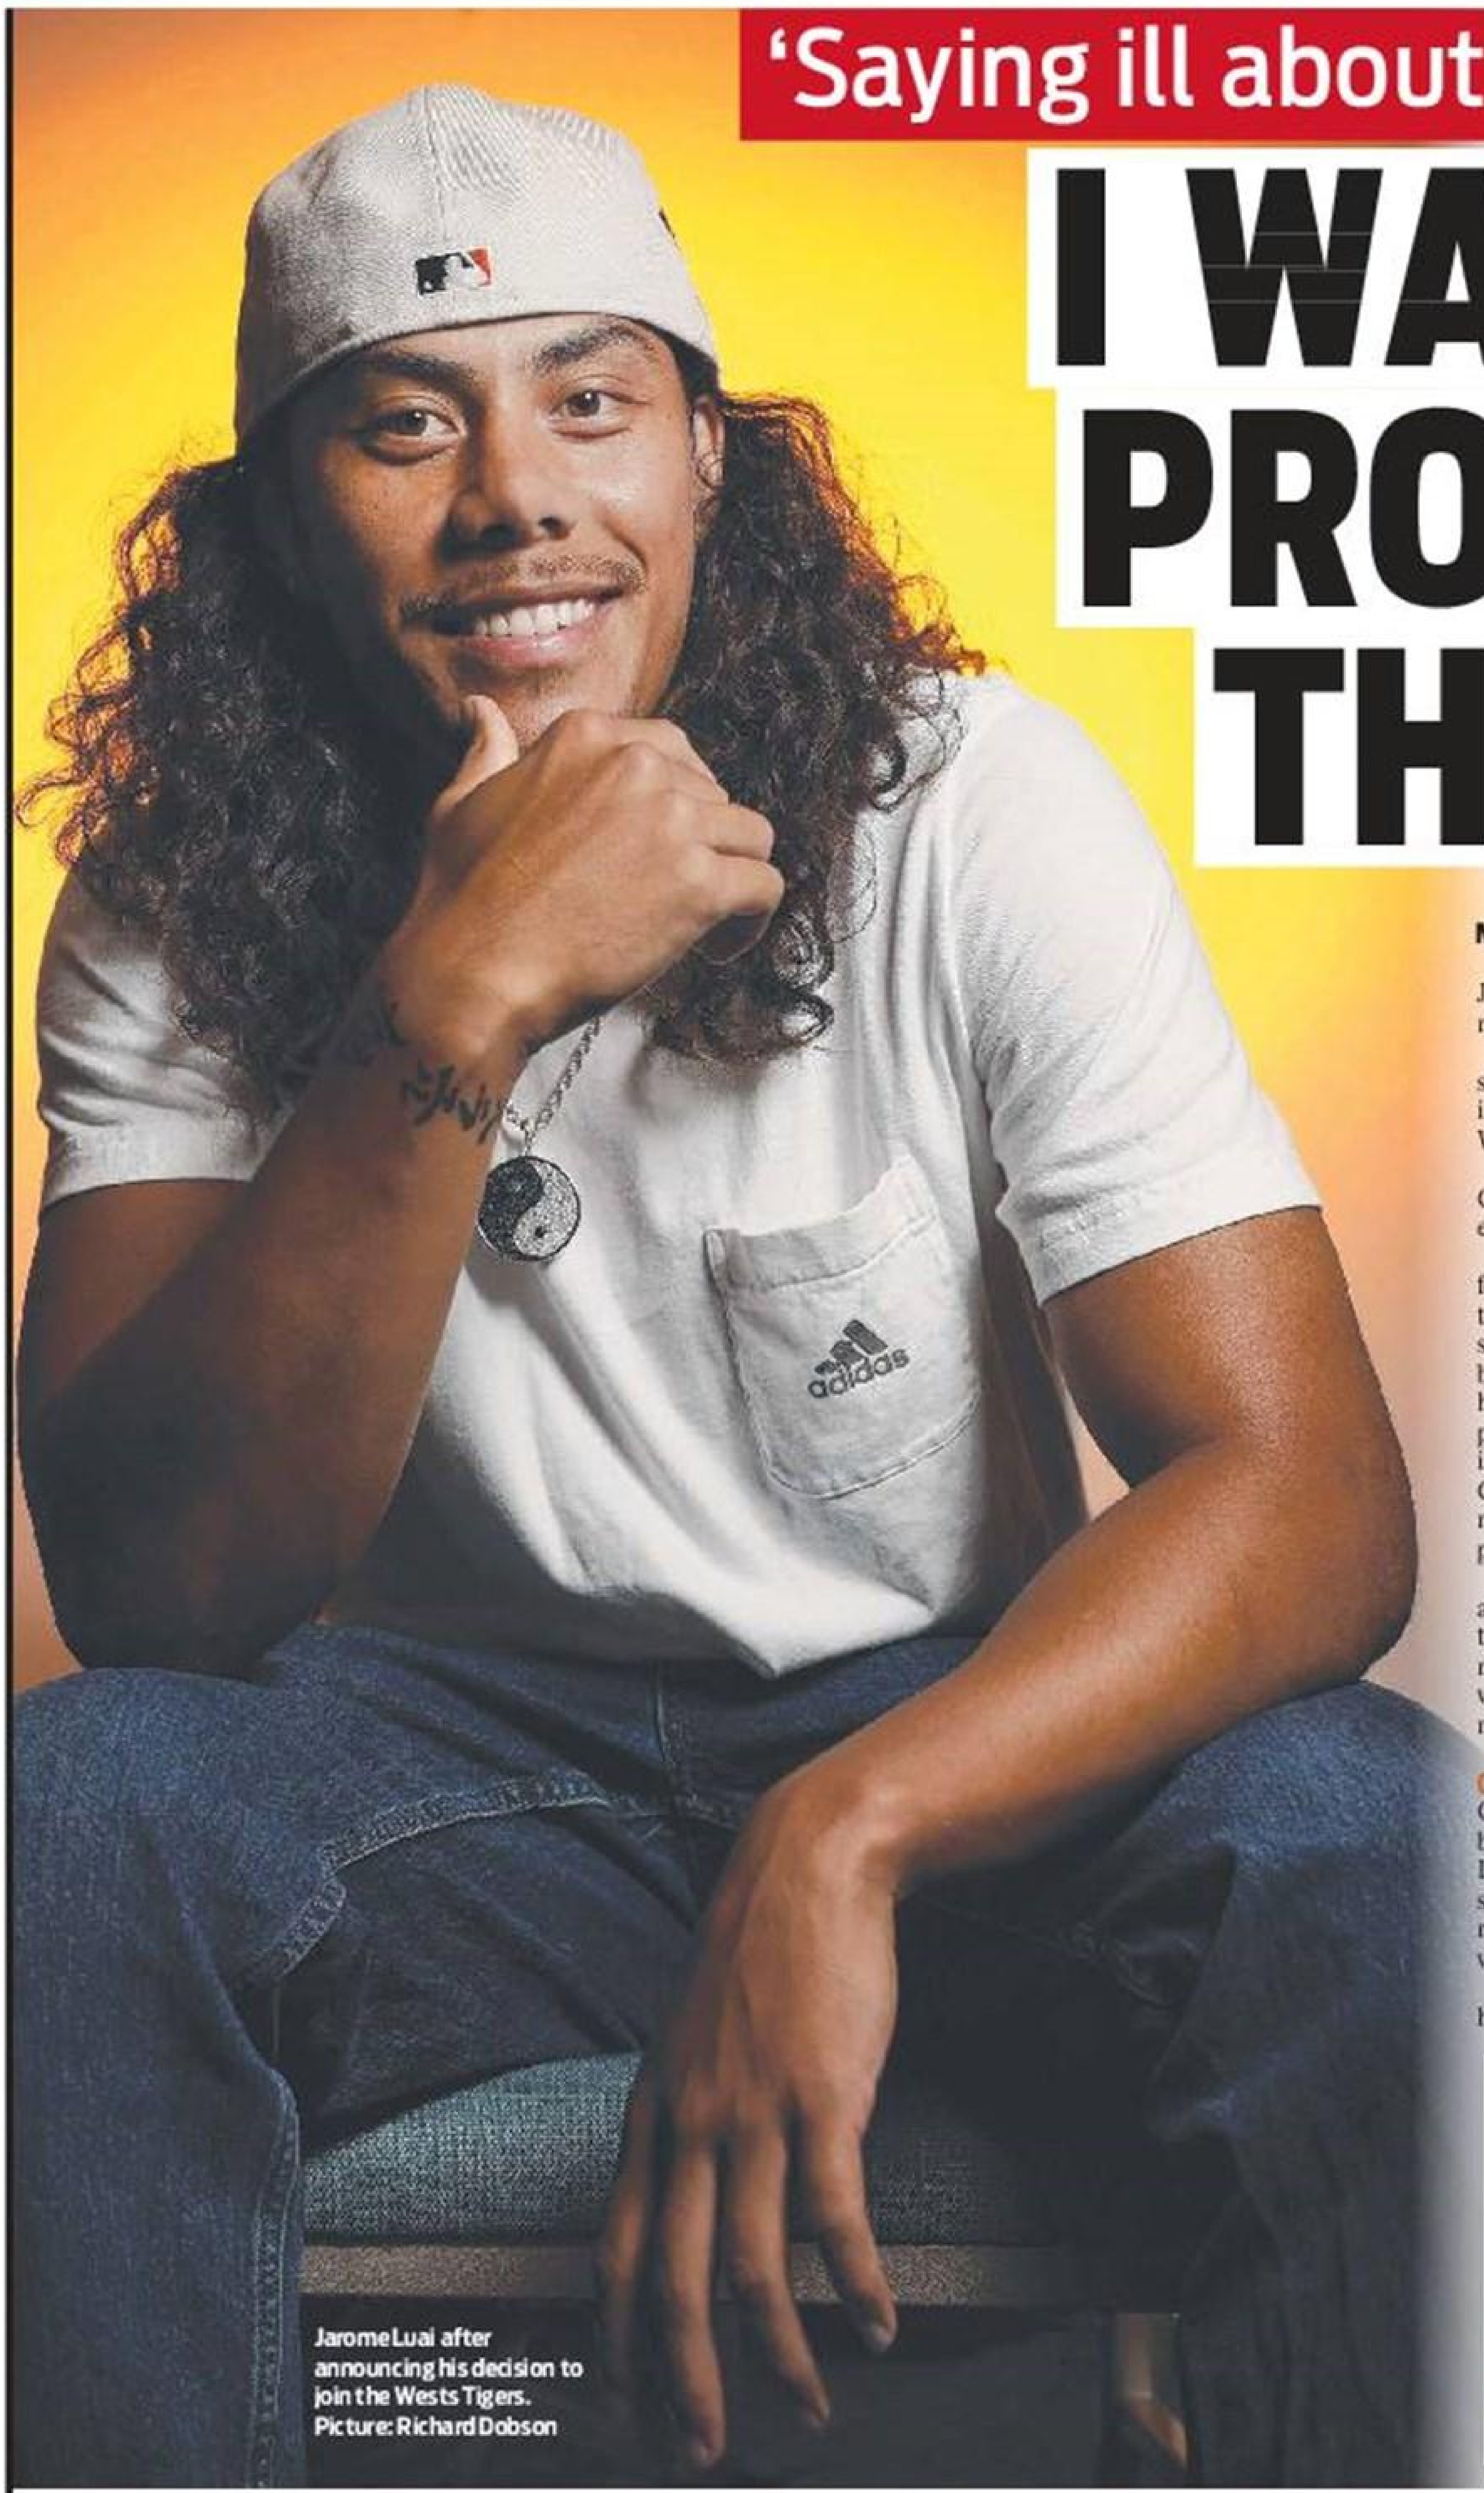
‘Saying ill about me, motivates

I WANT TO PROVE I’M THE MAN



Jarome Luai after announcing his decision to join the Wests Tigers. Picture: Richard Dobson

Michael Carayannis

Jarome Luai wants to be the man.

And he will have $1.2m to show that he can be after signing a five-year contract to join Wests Tigers from 2025.

Only Kalyn Ponga and Cameron Munster are set to earn more.

Leaving the three-time defending NRL premiers for the two-time wooden-spooners should be a hard sell but the bumper payday, learning from his idol Benji Marshall and proving the doubters wrong – including Panthers coach Ivan Cleary – led to Luai taking on a mega contract that will help provide for his future.

“I’ve seen a few headlines about how he is going from the top to the bottom and it resonated with me because I’m always backing myself to win, no matter where I go,” Luai said.

CLEARY’S COMMENTS

Cleary raised plenty of eyebrows when, in the midst of Luai’s contract talks, he said signing the 26-year-old to a rich contract to run a side would be a “risk”.

“It did shock me a bit but he’s not lying,” Luai said on Wednesday. “I just had to think about it and really he was right. I haven’t proven (myself) on the biggest stage yet. That’s what I want to prove to myself.

“I think anyone saying ill about me, motivates me. I have always had that edge and that chip on my shoulder. I have always been that kind of kid to prove people wrong.

“I’ve got love for Ivan, love for my boys. I didn’t want any of this to get in the way of those relationships.”

Luai skipped training a few days before Christmas after news broke he was leaving the Panthers. He will be back this week.

“It was a bit of a misunderstanding,” Luai said of what led to his absence. “I’m not going to go into detail about it but it’s been a tough process.

“I’ve had to move away from my home and think about that. It was a weird one, that’s why I had to step away for a bit because even we didn’t know what was going on.”

Despite the move in 2025, Luai reaffirmed his commitment to the Panthers for this year and said he was racing to be fit for round 1 after off-season shoulder surgery.

Working out where all the playmaking dominoes

Michael Carayannis

Wests Tigers signings Jayden Sullivan and Latu Fainu will have a 12-month shootout in a bid to partner Jarome Luai in the halves in 2025.

Penrith also has questions to answer around its long-term halves combination and the shape of its roster.

Luai’s announcement on Wednesday that he would join the Tigers and become one of the game’s highest-paid players has massive ramifications for the two clubs.

Penrith will give Daine Laurie, who returns from the Tigers on a one-year deal, a crack at five-eighth, while Jack Cole, who is under contract until the end of 2026, has long been earmarked as a first grader.

Cole spent last year switching between the halves and centre in NSW Cup but he too will be given every opportunity to become halfback Nathan Cleary’s right-hand man.

PANTHERS PRIORITIES

The Panthers had put off talks with a host of off-contract players, including hooker Mitch Kenny and outside backs Sunia Turuva and Taylan May, while they waited to see if Luai would take up their upgraded three-year deal worth about $900,000 a season.

That will change this month when they speak to them about long-term deals but they know rival clubs can offer more money.

The big decision revolves around how the Panthers want their roster to look when Luai has gone.

Do they stick with a cheaper, internal half and have significant cap space to strengthen their squad? Or do they dip into a near-barren open market?

The player pool has diminished quickly. Tom Dearden would have been perfect but he signed a new deal with North Queensland last month.

Brad Schneider, 22, has also arrived at the club on a two-year deal after stints with Canberra and Hull KR.

Luai and his future Tigers coach Benji Marshall after playing for the Maori Kiwis in 2021.

WHY THE TIGERS?

Luai idolised Marshall.

"My first game (watching) rugby league was (the 2005) grand final," Luai said. "We were out at a camping trip with my family. It inspired me.

"I had a Tigers towel and I wouldn't let my mum wash it. I have always been a big fan of Benji. He has seen a lot of himself in me. It was cool to hear it from him.

"He told me I was the guy to get them back to their feet. I think I've shown that (I can run a team) with my Samoan team at the World Cup. I've wanted it ever since."

Luai said he agonised over the decision before turning down the chance to join former Penrith assistant Cameron Ciraldo and former Panthers teammates Stephen Crichton, Viliame Kikau, Matt Burton and Jaeman Salmon at Canterbury. "This is why the process has dragged on for quite a while," Luai said.

"That was a tough decision. I've got a lot of brothers there already. Cam Ciraldo is like my second dad.

"That was pretty tough to turn that away and walk this path alone and face this new challenge."

THE REACTION

The signing is Marshall's first big one since being appointed head coach, having missed out on a handful of players in recent months.

He said he was "super excited" to land Luai.

"His experience as a genuine premiership-winning playmaker will be great for us and the future of our club," Marshall said. "We love the way Jarome plays and, even better, he is a great person."

Penrith boss Matt Cameron said the Panthers' focus was now on ensuring Luai returned to the field.

"We acknowledge that the situation is compounded by salary cap capacity due to the club's recent success," Cameron said.

"Jarome is in the process of recovering from shoulder surgery that he underwent in October and his rehabilitation to return for the upcoming season is the club's major priority."

Kudos to Jarome for fronting up

Michael Carayannis
Analysis

The first was that he fronted up and took ownership of his decision.

For too long, players have hidden behind carefully crafted press releases without taking responsibility for actions that can change their lives, transform clubs and bring joy or despair for fans.

Here was Luai, wearing a backwards Houston Astros baseball cap and white T-shirt, answering anything that came his way during the press conference at a hotel in Sydney's CBD on Wednesday.

He didn't hide from the fact that the money on the table from Wests Tigers was too good to refuse. Nor should he.

The Panthers were largely unaware the press conference was going to happen until late on Wednesday morning.

The Panthers could feel aggrieved that Luai was happily talking about joining a rival club. But they shouldn't. He did them a favour.

Had Luai gone down the press release route, the circus would have continued for not only the next couple of days, but weeks and even months until he spoke.

There would be camera crews and journalists chasing him at Penrith training today, trying to get him to explain his decision.

He has ended all that. Now, when asked about the Tigers, he can politely indicate that he has addressed all that and he won't speak about his future club until his commitments with the Panthers have ended.

Which he and his Penrith teammates hope will be after grand final night on September 29.

Penrith wasn't impressed by a doctored image which was posted on the Tigers' social media accounts, and on their website, on Wednesday. It lasted a few hours before it was replaced.

Tigers fans can have some genuine hope, even if things don't turn around instantly this year.

This move will define Luai's career. He will either join a long list of highly paid players who have failed to deliver at the Tigers or he may become a modern great.

He joked that he wanted five premiership rings in as many seasons at the Tigers.

The Tigers' initial social media post showing photoshopped images of Luai in a Tigers jersey that was later deleted and replaced with images of Luai playing with NSW.

Luai is expected to wear the No.7 jersey when he reunites with Panthers premiership-winning hooker Apisai Koroisau and rising fullback Jahream Bula.

Sullivan and Fainu are in the first months of their respective four-year deals worth a combined $1m a season.

The 18-year-old pathways program graduate and 2023 Australian Schoolboys five-eighth will join the club's top-30 roster this season on a three-year deal.

The club has high hopes for him, despite suggestions he could be on the way out. Galvin, whose 190cm frame is big enough to allow him to be a ball-playing lock, won't be released early from his contract.

FREE-AGENCY FALLOUT

Canterbury had given up hope of landing Luai, having not heard from the player's camp since Christmas. The Bulldogs learnt of his decision to sign with the Tigers during a press conference on Wednesday.

Luai agonised over the decision before turning down the chance to join former Penrith assistant Cameron Ciraldo and former Panthers teammates Stephen Crichton, Viliame Kikau, Matt Burton and Jaeman Salmon at Canterbury.

"This is why the process has dragged on for quite a while," Luai said. "That was a tough decision. I have a lot of brothers there already. Cam Ciraldo is like my second dad.

"That was pretty tough to turn that away and walk this path alone and face this new challenge."

The Bulldogs still have some cash to splash in 2025, given their pursuit of Luai and flirtation with Addin Fonua-Blake.

With Luai and Fonua-Blake (Cronulla) deciding their landing spots, Newcastle's Bradman Best looms as the biggest name without a long-term deal.

The NSW centre is yet to agree to Newcastle's offer of about $750,000 a season, which has been on the table for weeks.

DEMON AWE

Relentless Aussie shocks sore Djokovic

Ed Bourke

Alex de Minaur will enter the Australian Open as one of its hottest favourites after he continued his scintillating form to upset world No.1 Novak Djokovic in straight sets in Perth.

Djokovic will head to Melbourne Park under an injury cloud as he battles a right wrist issue that again prompted him to complain as he was beaten 6-4 6-4 at RAC Arena on Wednesday night.

The relentless de Minaur snapped Djokovic's record 43-match winning streak on Australian soil and avenged his heavy fourth-round defeat at last year's Australian Open in blistering fashion.

The victory gave Australia the early advantage in its United Cup quarter-final tie against Serbia, with Ajla Tomljanovic sealing the win for the home team with a 6-1 6-1 victory against world No.184 Natalija Stevanovic.

De Minaur said it felt "surreal" to have defeated Djokovic in front of a home crowd, in what was his first win over a world number one.

"Novak is an unbelievable competitor and what he's done for the sport is pretty special ... it feels amazing," he said after the match.

"It couldn't get any worse I guess," he said when asked about the 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 loss at Melbourne Park last year.

"When you go against Novak you've just got to go out there, try enjoy (it), back yourself and no matter what, just keep fighting until the end.

De Minaur said his improvement had been driven by critics writing him off as not enough of a physical threat to match it with the world's best.

"Ultimately, I'm never going to be the biggest or strongest guy, so I've got to adapt ... I'm glad I was able to bring this level today."

The 24-year-old was able to match the increased power he displayed during his demolition of world No. 10 Taylor Fritz on Monday, thumping a forehand winner down the line to steal a point off Djokovic's serve which turned into a break after a procession of errors by the Serbian superstar.

As de Minaur took a 5-4 lead following the first set break, Djokovic could be heard telling his trainer: "The more I'm playing, it's getting worse", referring to his wrist injury.

The Australian world No.12 won 100 per cent of points on his first serve in the opening set and continued to play aggressively in the second as he broke to take a 4-3 lead.

His trademark court coverage was on display in a brutal rally as he lunged to fend back three crushing blows from Djokovic before the champion sprayed his forehand into the net.

Djokovic served his way out of trouble to hold in that game, but de Minaur's physicality sent a strong message on his way to his first win over the superstar in their second meeting.

Callum Dick

Jason Kubler was fighting a fierce first-round battle against Aslan Karatsev on show court one when the roar came from inside Pat Rafter Arena.

He and Karatsev were forced to briefly pause their second set as the crowd next door erupted with delight, signalling Rafael Nadal's victory over Dominic Thiem.

Both men immediately knew what it meant. The winner would be facing one of the greatest of all time in the next round.

Suddenly the stakes were even higher.

"I think we both definitely knew that Rafa had won and that we were (going to play) Rafa – it was very obvious who won," Kubler said ahead of his Thursday night meeting with the 22-time Grand Slam champion.

"We had to stop play a couple of times because of it, in a couple of big moments in our match because the crowd was cheering for Rafa."

Kubler would go on to lose the second set in a close tie-breaker, but his Russian opponent went down with what looked to be a serious knee injury and was forced to retire from the match.

The stage was then set: Kubler versus Nadal. A Brisbane International second round clash set to divide the tennis diehards.

In Kubler they have the local hope; the Brisbane boy who trained on Pat Rafter Arena for more than a decade.

Then there is Nadal, the two-time Australian Open champion and arguably the most popular player in the sport's history, who could be playing Down Under for the final time this year.

Kubler heard the cheers, the "Rafa Rafa Rafa, Oi Oi Oi". He will command serious home crowd support on Thursday night. But there will undoubtedly be pro-Nadal pockets in Pat Rafter Arena.

"To be honest if they cheer for him or me it's going to be special regardless," Kubler said.

"Getting to play Rafa on my home court, so regardless of all the other outside stuff just that alone is special.

"I'm 30 now so any sort of big match against one of the legends of the sport is pretty cool."

Callum Dick

Former world No.1 Naomi Osaka will head to Melbourne earlier than expected but confident she can make an impression at the Australian Open this month.

Osaka, 26, marked a triumphant return from a 15-month tennis hiatus this week when she saw off Tamara Korpatsch in the first round of the Brisbane International.

But familiar foe and defending Brisbane champion Karolina Pliskova was too tall a task for the returning Japanese superstar on Wednesday.

In a rematch of the 2020 semi-final, Pliskova came from a set down to win 3-6 7-6 (4) 6-4 on Pat Rafter Arena.

"The week is shorter than I wanted it to be but overall I think it was a great match and I had a lot of fun," Osaka said.

"I saw the stats after and my break points could have been better, but I think other than that we both played really well."

There was no such stumble from No.1 seed and reigning Australian Open champion Aryna Sabalenka, who breezed into the third round with a 6-3 6-0 win over Lucia Bronzetti.

The world No.40, who converted just one of 14 break points in the heartbreaking 6-7 (9) 6-4 7-6 (3) defeat.

It was a much better day for Aussie wildcard James Duckworth, who continued his stellar start to 2024 with a gritty three-set victory over world No.51 Yannick Hanfmann that catapulted him inside the top 100. The Sydneysider, who had to fight through two stages of qualifying just to feature in the main draw, dropped the first set before finding form to run out a 4-6 6-1 7-6 (2) victor.

Meanwhile, Daria Saville's Australian Open wildcard hopes are now out of her hands after falling 4-6 6-3 4-6 to Anastasia Potapova.

Gold Coaster Olivia Gadecki was no match for No.2 seed Elena Rybakina, falling 6-4 6-1.

Japan's Naomi Osaka.

STAND OUT IN A CROWD

Surfing Star Isabella Nichols has transformed her body in the gym and is using Where's Wally to improve her thinking under pressure as she chases more success to go with her win at the Margaret River Pro (below left) in 2022. Where's Wally and weight gain aren't your typical key ingredients for athletic excellence but surfing star Isabella Nichols believes they are exactly what will take her to the next level.

The 25-year-old Queenslander, with the help of sports psychologists, is incorporating unique methods into her training as she prepares for the 2024 season.

"I've been doing a lot of pressure drills because I've found that my weakness is making decisions under duress, stress and pressure," Nichols said.

"Especially in the heat, as time ticks on, I just have to make a decision, not even the right decision, just a decision.

"I've been putting myself in those situations more often where I have made the stakes a lot harder and a lot higher, adding challenges along the way, so if I do make a decision there are consequences."

So Nichols, who won the 2022 Margaret River Pro in the WSL series, has turned to the world's favourite hidden red-and-white-striped figure.

"We've done some Where's Wally things or some Scrabble games where you have to think on your feet really quickly, and then run back out and continue the heat," she said.

"We'll have a 15-minute heat and the consequence would be if you take off on a wave you will have to come and do a physically or mentally draining activity so it gives you the stimulus that, 'If I make a decision there are consequences'.

"Even if it's a good decision, you still have to come in and run around a pole.

"Those are things we've been doing to drill down that you do need to make a decision, and there are consequences and rewards for every action.

"But being decisive in any way, shape or form is better than being indecisive.

"They are 15 minute heats, so with the Where's Wally test you really have to calm your mind down and find out where he is, and it makes it a lot harder if you're thinking about getting your next wave.

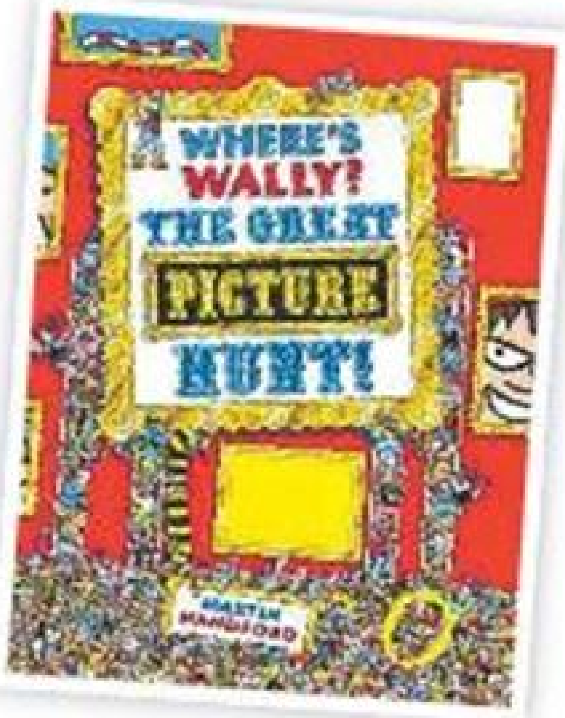
"You have to learn how to focus on your breath and slow it down. Same with the Scrabble, the longer you spend on those tasks, the less time you get in the water, so it's regulating. I'm doing that through Surfing Australia. They have a couple of sports psychs there who have been helping me, to put myself in those situations more often.

"A lot of the time I fail, there are times I get it. Hopefully the more I do, the better I'll get at it. Even learning how to make a decision in general life, like what I want for dinner, what I want to do that day, all correlate to being a better performer in the water.

"It gives me the ability to make a decision quickly and confidently."

Nichols finished 15th overall in the women's series last year, having made the second round in the first three events, placing third at Bells Beach and then bombing at Margaret River to be knocked out in the first round and cut mid-year.

"If I can make the mental improvements, I'll give myself a lot better chance to not have to go back to the Challenger Series," Nichols said. "Even having tough conversations rather than avoiding them like I previously did, that can lead to being more decisive in the water. I still have a long way to go but I still have time.



"I go to Hawaii on January 6, the competition doesn't start until the 29th, so I have time to work on things."

One of the key changes she has made over the years is her physique. She has used a training routine of weightlifting, pilates, cardio and breath work to gain weight.

"My body is changing," Nichols said. "It's a bit daunting at times because I used to have a really quick metabolism. Now, it's always what I've wanted – to get bigger and stronger – but it's daunting. I'm really happy with how responsive my body has been. But not just the surf industry, every industry, has painted a picture of thin surf girls in bikinis. Only recently, that's been knocked down by people. I know this but it's hard mentally to watch your body change even though you know it's for the better.

"Society is changing and we are realising that athletic women have different body shapes, and will have different body shapes if you want to do well, and that is my goal.

"It's breaking those gender stereotypes that we've been so ingrained to listen to from a young age but it is changing.

"I was 57kg a few years ago, I was a bloody stick insect. I look back at photos and think, 'How did I not snap?'

"Now I'm 66kg to 67kg and feeling really strong and fit, and it's just that adaptation period that a lot of females go through, but I'm stoked.

"I don't want any young females getting into surfing thinking they need to be stick thin. I don't think there are any females on tour now that are uber thin.

"You need a different body type, with the change in wave profiles going to Pipe and Sunset and Bells and Margs.

"It's like a big-wave tour now so you actually need a bit of meat on your bones. You wouldn't throw any spray or look powerful, which is what the judges want."

Nichols is determined to bounce back into the top 10.

"The last few years have been very different, making the cut last year and then having to do the Challenger Series this year," she said. "It's been a lot of adjusting but I feel like it's taught me a lot about myself and what I need to do to improve. That's where I spent a lot of the past six months, looking at how I can get better.

"Whereas maybe if I had not have that happen to me I wouldn't have looked so closely at the flaws I have and how I can improve.

"So it's been good but it's been a very tough challenge confronting all those things I need to get better at and working towards doing it, and failing a lot of the time at it.

"It's been rewarding and I love it. I have the best job in the world, we get to travel the world and go surfing."

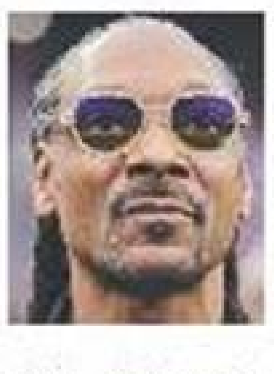
Snoop back in rings for special Paris gig

Acclaimed rapper Snoop Dogg will be a special reporter for US broadcaster NBC at the Paris Olympics this year.

The network has announced he will reprise his star turn at the Tokyo Games that delighted viewers.

"I grew up watching the Olympics and am thrilled to see the incredible athletes bring their A-game to Paris," Snoop Dogg said in a statement. "It's a celebration of skill, dedication and the pursuit of greatness.



Snoop Dogg will be a special reporter in Paris.

"We're going to have some amazing competitions and I will be bringing that Snoop style to the mix. It's going to be the most epic Olympics ever, so stay tuned, and keep it locked.

"Let's elevate, celebrate, and make these games unforgettable, smoke the competition, and may the best shine like gold. Peace and Olympic love, ya dig?"

NBC vice-president of Olympic production, Molly Solomon, said Snoop's commentating on dressage at the Tokyo Olympics in 2021 had gone viral and "earned Snoop a job as our special correspondent in Paris".

"We don't know what the heck is going to happen every day but we know he will add his unique perspective to our re-imagined Olympic primetime show," she said.

Teen in world darts final

Littler started nervously and lost the first set to Cross, the 2018 world champion, before stringing together three consecutive legs on his way to a staggering 6-2 victory.

Littler will meet Scott Williams or world No. 3 Luke Humphries in the world championships final.

Speedy filly can give Harry a Summer to remember

COFFEY'S BIG SHOT

Victorian jockey Harry Coffey quips that he has ridden at the Gold Coast Magic Millions carnival before – but only on Surfers Paradise beach during the iconic barrier draw event.

Group 1-winning jockey Coffey will ride on the mega-rich day on Saturday week for the first time, getting a sighter on the Gold Coast track when he rides there this Saturday.

Coffey will partner Tony and Calvin McEvoy-trained two-year-old filly Arabian Summer on both Saturdays.

Following the blueprint set by the McEvoy champion Sunlight in 2018, Arabian Summer will be deployed on the seven-day back-up into the $3m 2YO Classic after racing in Saturday's Gold Pearl over 1200m for 2YO fillies.

Arabian Summer is already safely in the 2YO Classic field, number two in the ballot order after winning the Ballarat 2YO Classic on December 9 where she beat last Saturday's impressive Godolphin Sydney winner Parkour by 3½ lengths.

Coffey, who has never won a race in Queensland where he has only ever had seven previous rides, can't wait to get involved.

"I went up there once and did a guest speaking function and did the Magic Millions beach race once, but I've never ridden at Magic Millions," Coffey said.

"Racing this Saturday not only means the horse gets to have a look at the track but it also gives me a look at the track, so it will hold us both in good stead.

"I think this filly is bomb-proof and she can race well in any track conditions. You are always worried that two-year-old horses are going to go off the boil, but she has just really thrived and she loves doing her trackwork and loves racing.

"Parkour looks a nice horse, things probably didn't suit it at Ballarat like it suited ours, but we still won convincingly.

"I really do think Arabian Summer brings the right sort of form lines."

Coffey and his wife, Tayla, delivered their first child last year and their now seven-month-old boy Thomas has just celebrated his first Christmas.

The family has packed their bags for the Gold Coast where the jockey will have a steely focus on winning the $3m Classic with Arabian Summer.

He is also set to have other rides for the McEvoys on Magic Millions day, including filly Sunset Dreaming in the $3m 3YO Guineas.

It is well known that Coffey lives with cystic fibrosis, having to defy the odds his entire career to prove he is capable of riding at the elite level.

In recent times, a new gene-modifying drug called Trikafta – which tricks Coffey's body into thinking it has a gene that he is missing – has changed the jockey's life for the better.

"It has made my quality of life so much better," Coffey said.

"My body doesn't have to work as hard and I don't have to visit hospital regularly to maintain where I am at. "It has just made everything easier.

"My riding has got better, I have got more energy to do things.

"The drug works by tricking my body into thinking I am not as bad as what I am.

"My body is working at a lot better efficiency and it is now doing things that it is supposed to do."

Arabian Summer, a $220,000 buy as a yearling, races for a syndicate that includes her breeder, Sheikh Mohammed Bin Khalifa Al Maktoum.

Ben Dorries

Mishani man Mike Crooks is known for his two-year-old racing empire, but the larrikin owner has revealed a bold new dream as the Gold Coast Magic Millions 2YO Classic nears.

He wants to win the Group 1 Stradbroke Handicap before he "carks it".

While he will still covet the rich Magic Millions with his band of young horses with the 'Mishani' moniker, Crooks has a fresh blueprint in his mind.

He is keen for Les Ross, a master of training juvenile horses, to continue training his two-year-olds from Crooks' private training facility.

But he is on the lookout for another horseman to train other older horses he intends to buy with the famous Stradbroke Handicap in mind.

For Crooks, who made his fortune building swimming pools and who famously plucked Ross out of his pub where he was a karaoke singer, it would be an exciting venture.

"My aim now before I cark it is to win the Magic Millions or the Straddy," Crooks said.

"At the end of the day I have to start considering the Stradbroke. I need to buy some new stock as when I have QTIS horses and they are ready to rock and roll. We have to go for that early two-year-old prize-money. I don't know why, but we get through the two-year-old season and our three-year-olds don't seem to run through the line.

"I know we race two-year-olds early and I know we get a few bucks out of them.

"People might think we overrace two-year-olds, but they are in and out very quickly and they honestly have three days off a week.

"Obviously I have got to look at how we can improve things and I would love to have some Stradbroke horses." Crooks, who is set to have at least one 'Mishani' two-year-old and possibly more in the Gold Coast Magic Millions 2YO Classic on Saturday week, has kept the training career of Ross alive as the trainer has flirted with retirement many times.

Crooks said Ross appeared keen to wind down in the next few years. So Crooks has floated a scenario which would see Ross purely train Crooks' two-year-old horses while another person trained older horses trying to win a Stradbroke.

"I am looking to probably build another (horse) barn on my property for the three and four year olds and older horses," Crooks said. "I would have that as a separate identity.

"Long term I have got somebody (another trainer) in mind, but I just want to get it right.

"But Les would keep training the two-year-olds, you can't beat him with two-year olds.

"If Les just had the two-year-olds to worry about, he could get some extra time off and it might keep him going a bit longer. I think winning a Stradbroke and winning the Magic Millions are both achievable."

The Crooks/Ross team have Mishani Aloha safely in the Magic Millions 2YO Classic, while Mishani Ego and Mishani Express are currently Nos.22 and 24 in ballot order.

Litchfield compared to Aussie legends

Ed Bourke

Phoebe Litchfield says it's a "huge honour" to be compared to batting great Meg Lanning after her commanding century fired Australia to a 190-run win over India in the third ODI.

Australia secured a series whitewash in Mumbai after the 20-year-old combined with captain Alyssa Healy for a 189-run opening stand to set up a score of 7-338, with India bundled out for 148 in reply.

Phoebe Litchfield

Litchfield survived more than 30 minutes stranded in the 90s – as Australia suffered a collapse of 4-27 – to bring up her second ODI century and put the innings back on track with Ash Gardner (30 off 27).

Her 119 came off 125 balls and included 16 fours and a six.

The left-hander's 260 runs at 86.66 had her crowned player of the series as she also became the youngest Australian to pass 50 six times in ODIs, achieving the feat 58 days ahead of a 20-year-old Meg Lanning.

Litchfield said it was a "cool feeling" to earn comparisons to Lanning and Belinda Clark after so quickly becoming one of Australia's best players.

"I looked up to Meg, and recently had Belinda Clark work with our Thunder group, so to be mentioned with those names is a huge honour," she said. "But I'm trying to take it each day at a time and not think too much into it and just keep scoring runs."

She said her prolonged time in the 90s was "stressful" but held her nerve after losing teammates Healy, Ellyse Perry, Beth Mooney and Tahlia McGrath.

"With the wickets falling around me, it was a bit stressful, but I just stayed really calm. I probably scored each run in singles, just wanting to get there and make the most of that big partnership," she said.

Australia was at its most clinical with the ball for the series as Megan Schutt removed both Indian openers in her first spell before Georgia Wareham (3-23) and Alana King (2-21) combined to tear through the middle order.

Heat weathers storm to extend winning run

Martin Gabor

Wet weather has continued to plague the BBL with a couple of untimely downpours helping the Brisbane Heat finish three runs ahead of the par score to sneak past the Sydney Sixers who will be frustrated that they had to go back on when they were ahead.

The Heat was 4-80 after 12 overs and two runs behind the par score chasing Sydney's 8-141 when heavy rain in Coffs Harbour forced both teams from the field, but the deluge quickly passed with umpires keen to get play back underway as soon as possible.

Three overs were lost which left the visitors needing a further 45 runs off 30 deliveries with just one power surge over, and they signalled their intent with Paul Walter welcoming Tom Curran back from his four-game ban with a monster six that landed on the grandstand roof.

Walter (23 not out off 15) then whacked a couple of boundaries in the surge over before the rain returned, with the Heat narrowly ahead when the game was called off to extend its unbeaten start to the season.

It's the third game in a row the Sixers have been affected by rain with their Sydney Smash derby abandoned one over short of a possible result, while their New Year's Day game against the Heat was washed out without a ball being bowled.

It looked like that might happen again with the ground at Coffs Harbour completely underwater just a few days ago, with staff doing an incredible job to get the field right in time.

WALTER FRIGHT

It looked like bones were about to break, but Heat duo Nathan McSweeney and Paul Walter managed to avoid disaster after a scary moment in the field.

Walter was bowling to Jack Edwards (22 off 15) who skied a ball into the night sky which seemed destined to land between the bowler and McSweeney, who was charging in off the fence.

McSweeney somehow held onto the catch and then did well to avoid the big Englishman who grazed him on the way through, with the pair then adding 32 in the chase to get their team over the line.

DROPPED CATCHES

While the English opener held onto three catches, it was a different story for the others with Kurtis Patterson dropping Josh Brown on one in the first over.

He made the hosts pay with a crucial 43 off 31 that included a towering six off Curran that also landed on the roof.

Curran's struggles continued when he put down a sitter when Brown was on 36, with the opener eventually running out of luck when he was knocked over by Steve O'Keefe.

The second-placed Sixers are now four points behind the Heat and will be hoping for some dry conditions when they face the Stars on Saturday.

Rookies strive to be in Teague of their own

Ed Bourke

Promising Sheffield Shield batters Jack Clayton and Teague Wyllie will have a chance to impress Australian selectors in a three-day tour game against the West Indies next week.

Peter Handscomb, who does not have a BBL contract this season, will lead a Cricket Australia XI at Adelaide's Karen Rolton Oval from January 12 as the raw West Indies side prepares for the two-Test series in Adelaide and Brisbane.

Cricket Australia moved to avoid a repeat of the PM's XI controversy, picking a team from outside the Big Bash.

The left-handed Clayton, one of Queensland's top Shield performers this season, and Western Australian young gun Wyllie are the two hottest batting prospects named in a 12-man squad that also includes young Warriors opener Jayden Goodwin and Tasmanian duo Tim Ward and Jake Doran.

Clayton posted a century and three 50s in the first half of the red-ball season, while Wyllie last summer became the youngest batsman since Ricky Ponting to score a Shield ton.

Chairman of selectors George Bailey said he wanted to mix domestic cricket's most consistent performers with some recent Shield debutants.

Victorian left-arm orthodox bowler Doug Warren, who has played two first-class games, is the only spinner named in the side, while towering WA left-arm quick Liam Haskett and NSW seamer Jack Nisbet are also Shield debutants.

"CA XI matches provide an excellent opportunity for some of our up-and-coming players on the domestic scene to face international opposition as well as rewarding consistent performers," Bailey said.

STAGE FRIGHT FOR A

Opener avoids early exit to farewell bash

Ben Horne

The scene is set for David Warner to give fans the fairytale they are craving, but not before the retiring hero survived a heart-stopping scare on the second last ball of the day.

Pakistan launched a stunning fightback at the SCG on day one from a crisis point of 4-47, meaning Warner was thrust into the nerve-racking hot seat of having to face a solitary over before stumps.

Commentators speculated whether nightwatchman Nathan Lyon might be sent out to see off the six tricky balls, but the SCG erupted when the local boy strode out of the members' gate, before pausing for a poignant embrace with opening partner Usman Khawaja, who he has played alongside since he was five-years old. Pakistan, which made a very competitive 313, paid Warner the respect of forming a guard of honour to welcome him to the middle.

Some might have questioned whether its generosity had gone too far when it pulled the surprise option of opening the bowling with spinner Sajid Khan – who Warner dispatched to the boundary off the very first ball.

But the blood pressure went through the roof on the penultimate delivery, when a Warner defensive shot bounced back over the stumps, clearing the bails by millimetres as Pakistani fielders threw themselves on the ground in agony at how close they came to spoiling the party.

Mitchell Marsh revealed post-match that Lyon was nearly sent out to protect the main act – but Warner will resume on day two on six, with the stage set for a signature performance in his final Test.

"History would suggest he's always been able to find stuff when he needs to," Marsh said.

"I saw the replay (of the second last ball), and it was mighty close. As we always say in this game, you need a little bit of luck. It's been an incredible build-up for him this week and one of our key themes for the week is to hopefully send him out with a win, but most importantly for him to enjoy his last five days as a Test cricketer."

Fearless Pakistan conjured an unexpected rear-guard uprising late on day one, which kept it well in truly in the Test – and made star of the show Warner wait to take centre stage. Pakistan No.9 Aamer Jamal hammered an extraordinary 82 off 97 to pile on a game-changing 86 runs for the final wicket, as Australia's bowlers were given flashbacks to some of the Ben Stokes-inflicted horrors of the Ashes.

After threatening a cake walk with an early blitzkrieg that left the visitors 5-96, and then having its opponent nine wickets down for 227, Australia reverted to the short-pitched bowling tactics that failed against England, to let Pakistan back into the contest and post a more-than-handy 313.

Jamal was playing every shot in the book, including a Glenn Maxwell-style reverse sweep for six off Nathan Lyon, until the champion off-spinner finally got his man caught in the deep to end the innings.

And not a moment too soon.

Had Pakistan batted another 17 balls to extend the innings past 80 overs they would have likely been docked points on the World Test Championship table for a slow over-rate.

Cummins' followed up his 10-wicket heroics in Melbourne with his third consecutive five-wicket bag – taking 5-61 in another performance which adds to his ever-growing greatness. It was all too easy for Australia until Pakistan's Mohammad Rizwan hit the accelerator with a brilliant knock of 88 off 103, before Cummins' finally outsmarted him.

Mitchell Starc struck with the second delivery of the match and finished with two wickets, including the important stopping of another flying Pakistan lower-order hitter Salman Ali Agha (53 off 67).

Mitchell Marsh thought he had the wicket of Shan Masood only to have it taken off him for a big front-foot no-ball. But Masood only added two to his score, before Marsh got him caught by Steve Smith at slip.

'He's that good': England great believes Cummins

Lachlan McKirdy

Pat Cummins will go down as Australia's second-greatest cricketer according to former England captain Michael Vaughan.

Cummins was at his devastating best with the ball on day one of the SCG Test, taking five wickets including the crucial dismissal of Pakistan wicket-keeper Mohammad Rizwan for a defiant 88 just before tea. But as the fast bowler continues to build on his already impressive legacy, Vaughan claimed that once his career is over it will rate only behind Sir Donald Bradman.

"I don't think he's ever going to surpass Sir Don, but I think Cummins is going to end up being Australia's greatest cricketer after Sir Don," Vaughan said on Fox Cricket.

"Captain, bowling, numbers, five to seven years left to play you would think.

"He's that good that we'll be talking about him in a few years' time as just behind Sir Don Bradman."

It's a strong declaration from Vaughan considering the calibre of players Australian fans have had to cheer for over the years. Shane Warne, Ricky Ponting, Greg Chappell and Steve Smith would all be in the conversation, but there's no doubt that Cummins's record stacks up among the best.

Cummins took his career tally to 257 wickets in 58 Tests after finishing with 5-61 against Pakistan on Wednesday, his third-consecutive five-wicket haul.

Only Glenn McGrath has taken more wickets at a better average for Australia than Cummins (22.12).

Across Tests in Australia, Cummins's average has now dropped to 19.09, giving him the third-best average in home conditions in the history of Test cricket (minimum 100 wickets).

Cummins's record could have been greater if injury hadn't cruelled the early part of his Test career. Since making his debut in 2011, Cummins has missed 70 Tests for his country through injury or due to unavailability.

With an incredible strike rate of 46.2, Cummins could have more than doubled his current wicket tally and already be considered cricket's greatest-ever fast bowler at the age of just 30.

But it's a credit to Australian on track to be best since Bradman cricket that they put their faith in science and rest when Cummins's body was failing him. The result is an experienced bowler in his 30s now bowling with the energy of a 20-year-old and the peak of his powers still to come.

As Vaughan mentioned, Cummins's credentials are further enhanced by his exemplary start to life as Australian captain.

While he's been faultless in Test series at home, the Australian side has also claimed a historic World Cup win in India, a maiden World Test Championship win and retained the Ashes in England under his watch.

His bowling record also shows that he has embraced the pressure of juggling captaincy and being a strike bowler. Since taking on the mantle, his strike rate has improved by almost three balls per wicket, while he has also taken more five-wicket hauls in fewer Tests.

However, according to readers of this masthead, Vaughan may have jumped the gun in giving Cummins such high praise. In an online poll, the late Shane Warne still ranks as Australia's best player since Bradman. The legendary leg-spinner received more than half of the more than 2000 votes with Ricky Ponting coming in second with just under 20 per cent. Chappell, Smith, Adam Gilchrist and Keith Miller also received more votes than Cummins.

But time is certainly on Cummins's side and Vaughan could be proved right if the success of this all-conquering Australian team continues.

'Warner week' we need

Farewell boosts Test cricket

Robert Craddock

Test cricket needed "David Warner week" even more than David Warner did.

The coverage of Warner's thrills and spills, where he ranked in the pantheon of top batsmen, the boyhood photos, family snaps, tributes, stumbles, press conference tears and the missing caps.

And then the late first-day drama, the hug with Usman Khawaja, the first-ball mortar shot to the fence and the stunning escape to one which did everything but kiss the stumps on the penultimate ball of the day.

When these threads were wrapped in one sentimental package, it boomed out a clear message: Test cricket, abandoned old thing that she is becoming, is still the sweetest place in the sport and the one where you will always be remembered.

In this of all weeks, with South Africa sending a second-string squad to New Zealand for a two-Test series to allow its top players to play T20s at home, Test cricket needed to show why it still mattered.

The setbacks come almost daily now – day one of the Test brought news that Pakistan pace ace Shaheen Shah Afridi had been rested to freshen him for five T20s against New Zealand.

In bygone eras, that would have been like a golfer missing the British Open to play the monthly medal.

Test cricket won't win the war against the global push for T20 cricket. Money doesn't talk in cricket, it swears.

By the time the Brisbane Olympics hit in 2032, it is doubtful there will be many more than three or four nations playing five-day cricket which is why the game's longest format needs to keep its gloves in the air.

It's also why weeks like this are so important.

Unlike T20 and 50-over cricket, where fans are often unsure of when players played their first and last games, Test cricket needs to show that debuts are huge news and retirements even bigger.

Since Warner announced during the Ashes his intention to strive for an SCG farewell, there has been enormous conjecture about the merits of letting him stay that long.

Fair enough too.

His form has faded. He is not the player he was. Those who argued for him to go have no reason to apologise.

But the emotions of the past week proved why it was the best thing for the game for him to be given a send-off that has enriched what would have been a flat and featureless five-dayer.

Over the years there have been plenty of cricket observers (my hands in the air) who have never loved players giving a throw-forward retirement announcement because it always seems a bit indulgent.

But this week has proven why the game actually needs more of them.

By the time this match is over, the farewells of Warner and Stuart Broad in England will be two of the most memorable occasions in recent Test cricket.

The more cricket celebrates its five-day heroes, the more kids will want to grow up to be that person.

So here's the message to the likes of Khawaja and Steve Smith – don't go quietly. The game needs you.
